The Immovable Obstacle Gone to His Creator

Intelligence in the Universe?

Three Things We Know Not

— By Arthur Brisbane —

LEADERS OF ALL parties in England denounce France, and it is probable that President Hoover's opinion of the French government, which he will not express, would make violent reading.

But the French know what they want, and usually get it. In this case, they represent the "immovable obstacle" and the not very "irresistible force." America, England, Germany, etc., will probably accept the French viewpoint, because they can't do anything else.

Some believe the desperate "plight" of Germany to be partly imaginary, arranged to produce financial results.

But the French don't think so.

One thing that could happen, with a bad collapse in Germany, would be the rise to power of the so-called "Reds," which would mean chaos. Or Hitler, the imitation Mussolini, might make some kind of gesture aimed at France.

France believes in being ready, and, yesterday afternoon, Prime Minister Laval lunched at the ministry of war, with Petain and Lyautey, the two leading French marshals. Paris newspapers guess that the prime minister and the marshals discussed arrangements for taking care of anything that might happen on the German border.

The long line of forts, recently erected by France along that border, plus the great French army, plus the French air fleet, most powerful on earth, and the fleet of French submarines, could take care of anything that might happen quite easily.

"He was a very decent, respectable man," his neighbors said of John Tabeek, who sat last Sunday in New York's Fifth Avenue Presbyterian Church, listening to the Rev. Dr. Speer. Tabeek was out of work, out of money, worst of all, out of COURAGE. Math verloren, alles verloren, beside du unterest wie geboren. He would not ask his friends and relatives to assist him further.

So he listened attentively to the sermon, wrote on a piece of paper: "I am going to meet my Creator," swallowed poison and died.

That is a thing you should not do in a Fifth ave. church. Fortunately, the 400 worshipers knew nothing about it.

If a million, or ten million, imitated Tabeek, that would attract attention. But an occasional individual, going to meet his Creator, makes little difference.

Did Tabeek, on the other side of the poison bottle, have an opportunity to tell anybody in authority how this world had treated him? Or did he perhaps find that nobody cared, there or here?

Prof. Frost, director of the Yerkes Observatory, finds indications that there exists a "mind" in the universe. He is not like the French scientist, who replied to Napoleon's question concerning God: "I have no need of that hypothesis."

If a cockroach in a skyscraper could talk, and say: "I believe there is somebody engineering this skyscraper, you would be amused.

Somebody, somewhere in creation, is amused when one of the little germs on this earth gram of dust discovers indications of a guiding intelligence in the universe.

What are vitamins? We know that we can't live without them, that they cure rickets in children, what foodstuffs contain the various vitamins, and scientists have just discovered that two of them, vitamins A and B, give off some kind of strange radiation. Rats deprived of certain necessary vitamins have no children, deprived of other vitamins, they starve to death, although supplied with abundance of food.

Three important things we possess without knowing what they are, electricity, vitamins, and the soul of man.

The United States refused to sell 250,000 bales of American cotton to Russia. American cotton growers will wonder why. If we would sell cotton, as Lord H averbrook remarked, to cannibals. Why not sell to the Bolsheviks? At least, they don't EAT each other.

This week Russia is purchasing 50,000 bales of cotton in Egypt. Our British and Egyptian brothers have no objection to Bolshevik money. Are we not a little provincial, in "good old America," or do we think we were born to tell other nations how they must run their governments, and what they must believe about the sacredness of the dollar, as opposed to the comparative unimportance of the human being?

Somebody stole 28 canary birds, as they sat in their cages, singing sweetly. And, having

Police Hunt Galvin, Witness in Hathaway Trial, to Appear Against Mayes

Fall River, July 14—Interest was revived today in the murder of Verna Russell, student nurse slain by Elliott Hathaway, by two new developments affecting persons who played prominent roles in the case.

Vernon Galvin, the Fall River playboy's former friend and star witness for the state in Hathaway's trial, is missing, it was revealed.

Galvin today became the object of a police search after he had twice failed to appear in court on a liquor charge, declared today that he had been promised immunity by Atty.-Gen. William C. Crossley, of Rhode Island in return for his testimony at Galvin's trial.

Should he be prosecuted, Mayes declared, he will refuse to appear as a government witness if Hathaway is granted a new trial.

Galvin, due in court last Thursday and again today, could not be located by police. Neighbors had no knowledge of his whereabouts, and the Galvin home was unoccupied.

The case against Mayes was continued for a week today pending the outcome of the search for Galvin.

BOY IN TEARS AS DEATH HOVERS

Stays at the Bedside, Clasping Her Hand; Gets Word of Cheer From Bride

By RUTH MUGGLEBEE
Boston Evening American Staff Correspondent.

Westbrook, Me., July 14—Rudy Valley's mother slipped gradually toward eternity today while he sat beside her in a darkened room, clasping her hand.

Death for Mrs. Katherine Valley, 61-year-old mother of the radio crooner, was "only a matter of hours," Dr. A. D'Arche said after attending her this morning.

Rev. William A. Culbert, of St. Mary's Church, who administered the last rites of the Roman Catholic faith, again called at the Valley home today and spent a few minutes in the sick room.

Following the departure of Fr. Culbert, Mrs. Valley slept a little and Rudy stole into the next room and telephoned his bride.

She said she felt better and told him to keep up his courage.

HOPES FOR A MIRACLE

The handclasp stayed death for a time but early this morning Mrs. Valley failed considerably and the end was reported near.

"Only a miracle can save her," Dr. D'Arche said, and Rudy, who has eaten little and slept not at all since his arrival by plane from New York last night, replied:

"There are sometimes miracles."

For a time the handclasp was like a transfusion of physical strength from the son to the mother who gave him life, but it could not hold her out of the deep shadow for long.

Telephone and door bells had been disconnected in the house, but messages of sympathy from the crooner's admirers throughout the

GERMAN LOAN EXTENDED FOR THREE MONTHS

Bank Closings Spread to the Balkans and Northward; Riots in Berlin

BULLETIN

Berlin, July 14 (AP)—The Reichsbank announced this afternoon that the $100,000,000 rediscount credit from the international banks of issue and the World Bank which matures on Thursday has been extended for three months.

The announcement was made after Dr. Hans Luther, president of the Reichsbank, returned by airplane from Basel, Switzerland.

Berlin, July 14—With Germany battling against odds to stave off bankruptcy and collapse, financial panic spread throughout central Europe today.

Blood was shed here in rioting of two elements of radicals opposed to the government.

In Vienna the Merkur Bank, Austria's branch of the Darmstaedter und National Bank of Berlin, closed its doors.

In Rumania the Dacia Bank at Jassy shut up with a deficit of a million dollars.

In Budapest the government decreed that all banks and financial institutions remain closed today, tomorrow and Thursday to protect Hungary.

DANZIG BANK CLOSES

In Danzig, Danzig Free State, the Bank for Trade and Industry, subsidiary of the Darmstaedter und National Bank, suspended payments today. It is believed the bank is solvent.

In Riga, Latvia, the Riga International Bank and the Bank of Libau suspended payments. The Latvian cabinet decided to guarantee deposits in Latvian currency, but asserted it could not extend any assistance to depositors whose accounts are in foreign currency.

Other banks and savings banks in the Free City's territory are closed in accordance with the government decree.

In Belgium, Luxembourg, Denmark and Switzerland German marks were suspended because of the number of Germans crossing the borders to purchase foreign money. Many persons from Ger-

DOG TIES UP 'L' 15 MINUTES

A very much untrained bull dog gleaned considerable of a training today at Forest Hills Elevated terminal when the mongrel doubled himself beneath a four-car train and tied up the works for 15 minutes.

The mongrel, for some reason known only to mongrels, leaped into the elevated train pit as a train came into the station preparatory for loading on the trip north.

While passengers gasped, the train rumbled over the spot where the dog had been seen—and then Elevated trainmen investigated. Crouched under one of the cars was the dog—not even appearing shopworn. And he was keeping carefully away from the third rail.

After 15 minutes of coaxing had proved unavailing, the train was pulled slowly out of the station and the mongrel, still intact, was lifted up to the platform, to scamper away.

many were stranded because of this action.

RIOTING IN BERLIN

On the heels of these developments in countries bordering on Germany came the first clash since the crisis, between German Fascists (Hitlerites) and Communists, the two radical parties that are waiting a favorable opportunity to turn Chancellor Heinrich Bruening's cabinet out of office and seize the government.

Police killed one Communist in rioting. Several others were injured and three were arrested.

The Hitlerites, known both as the Nazis and Fascists, want to tear up the Young plan, even at the risk of war with France. The Communists want to establish a Soviet government in Germany.

Meantime all Germany is under virtual economic dictatorship effected as result of the authority granted under the emergency clause of the constitution to the cabinet by President Paul von Hindenburg.

ALL BANKS CLOSED

All banks and credit houses will remain closed today and tomorrow with the exception of the Reichsbank and all stock exchanges are closed for the rest of the week.

The cabinet also has announced a virtual moratorium for the Danat Bank, the Darmstaedter und National, which failed yesterday. The government will undertake to reorganize the institution.

Fear that a repetition of yesterday's runs would take place throughout the country caused the government to order the two-day bank holiday. Simultaneously it was announced that the banks would be used to make provision for payment of salaries and resumption of business Thursday.

The ministry of posts today ordered that no more money orders be issued to foreign countries, so as to curb foreign exchange withdrawals.

Serious scenes developed in the Berlin livestock market today when traders demanded payment for their livestock in cash. The market closed until the ministers of finance and agriculture intervened and persuaded the traders to accept checks.

GERMAN PRESS CHEERFUL

Several Berlin newspapers are taking a philosophical view of the situation.

The democratic Vossziteung predicts an end of Germany's surplus products at almost any price and says if the government acts vigorously the crisis will be overcome and prove to be best for it in the end.

The democratic Morgen Post sarcastically observes that Germany is paying for the millions of votes cast for Adolf Hitler, Fascist leader, in September.

"The German voter lost his head then," the paper said, "could we really expect in other countries that they should keep theirs — that means of course first of all France?"

The nationalist Lokalanzeiger says sudden withdrawals from savings banks might be a blessing in disguise because the money soon will find its way back to the banks via the shopkeepers, and thus enliven trade.

Commenting this view, shopkeepers near the banks directly affected said yesterday was the biggest day they had had in years. They said that once the people got their hands on marks they began to buy initiative and followed the principle of "spend it while it's still worth something."

HINDENBURG ASSAILED

Radio broadcasters are working overtime urging the public to keep reserve, not to surrender to panic and to remember that Germany is financially sound.

Paul von Hindenburg, 82 year-old President of the German republic, was made the target of newspaper attacks today for his absence from Berlin during the economic crisis.

The chief executive, who has been spending the summer at his country estate in Neudeck, East Prussia, is due in Berlin tomorrow and is expected immediately to preside at an extraordinary cabinet session. Some newspapers say he should have returned earlier, declaring his presence would have had a reassuring effect upon the nation during the Reich's financial difficulties.

Henderson in Paris Before Going to Berlin

Paris, July 14 (AP)—Arthur Henderson, British foreign secretary arrived tonight from London for a series of conferences with French government officials before joining Prime Minister Ramsay MacDonald in Berlin Friday for another Anglo-German parley.

Their visit to Germany has been scheduled ever since Chancellor Bruening and Foreign Minister Curtius went to England last month.

Washington Still Sees Danger of Collapse

Washington, July 14 (AP)—The financial situation in Germany was the cause of deep concern today in administration circles.

Reports on the final economic position of the Bruening government from American Ambassador Sackett in Berlin and Rudolf Leitner, charge d'affaires of the German embassy, indicated conditions still were bordering on collapse.

While the American government can take no direct action, President Hoover has been assured domestic bankers would place their powerful influence behind any plan that would bring about Germany's economic restoration.

American business interests, with more than $2,000,000,000 at stake, also were studying the economic crisis of Germany. American investors hold between $1,350,000,000 in long-term investments in Germany, most of which was acquired since 1919.

Berlin May Return to Rentenmark System

Berlin, July 14 (AP)—Additional emergency decrees, it was expected today, probably will be issued by the Government tonight.

One is one to govern trading in foreign exchange and another to halt the flight of capital from Germany.

One project the experts suggest is to bring back into circulation the "rentenmark" Germany's first currency after the mark was stabilized in 1923. It was backed not by gold but by five per cent bonds of 500 gold marks or multiples thereof charged on Germany agriculture and industry.

More than 2,000,000,000 in rentenmarks were printed and about 2,000,000,000 circulated, but in 1924 the Reichsbank absorbed them and issued Reichsmarks backed by gold and foreign exchange, so that today only about 400,000,000 rentenmarks are in circulation.

Normally these would have been absorbed by 1942.

By substituting the rentenmark for the reichsmark it is hoped to halt in some degree the flight of capital, for the rentenmark is domestic tender only.

Besides taking the reichsmark out of circulation and substituting the rentenmark, the experts project provides also that the rentenmark could be accepted as collateral instead of gilt edged securities, so that additional currency could be put into circulation without causing inflation.

stolen them, turned them loose in the park.

It was mistaken kindness. You might as well take 28 sons of very rich men from their yachts, automobiles or polo ponies, and turn them loose in the struggle for existence.

They wouldn't thank you.

Samuel Sabino, 15, sat at his newsstand. A passing taxicab slowed down, two bullets from the cab entered the boy's chest, killed him. The cab went on.

Police say that for a boy of 15 to be "put on the spot" is unusual, but there is nothing puzzling about it. The boy's father had been told to do something, had refused, or failed, and the boy was killed as a warning to obey next time.

Our modern crime is thorough.

Simla, India, July 14 (AP)—Two persons were killed and one was injured today when police fired on a crowd which was attacking revenue officials and seizing property at Mustafabad.

BRITISH BANKS REFUSE MARKS

London, July 14 (AP)—German marks were refused by England's banks today in payment of bills and in other transactions. One banking house said the refusal was due to closing of German banks, making exchange operations impossible.

This, it was said, is in line with a policy understood to have been adopted throughout Great Britain and in most of Europe.

Brussels, July 14 (AP)—Luxembourg banks decided today to suspend marks on the exchange markets because of the number of Germans crossing the frontier to purchase foreign currency.

Hotel keepers in Ostend were refusing marks from German tourists, putting them in an awkward position inasmuch as they had no means of returning to their country.

In Copenhagen, Denmark, several thousand German tourists were stranded in hotels because chauffeurs and shopkeepers refused to accept marks. It was recalled that Danes lost billions by the fall of the mark in 1923.

FALL IS TO GO TO WESTERN JAIL

Washington, July 14 (AP)—Albert B. Fall's jail sentence of a year was changed today to a year and a day to enable him to serve his time in a western prison.

The attorney-general is expected immediately to designate the prison where the former secretary of the interior will serve.

The clerk of the District of Columbia Supreme Court will then send a warrant of commitment to the United States marshal in New Mexico, or Texas, and he will take Fall to prison.

Under the new sentence Fall will become eligible to parole in four months, but the fact that his fine of $100,000 has not been paid would require an additional 30 days of service if he should take a pauper's oath, instead of paying the fine.

The change in the sentence will not deprive Fall of his citizenship, although he will probably lose his civil rights in New Mexico. These could be restored to him by the governor.

GUARD SCORED IN SINKING OF RUM BOAT

Rescued Crew Charges That Navy Chasers Opened Fire Without Any Warning

Providence, R. I., July 14—dramatic sniking, in a burst of flame, of the $60,000 speedboat Yvette June by a barrage from the one-pounders and machine guns of three Coast Guard patrol boats at the mouth of Sakonnet River at dawn today, promised revelations rivalling the Black Duck episode 18 months ago.

Five members of the speedboat's crew, which met her doom on her maiden trip, claim they were fired on without warning. They were arrested after having been literally snatched from death by coastguardsmen.

The most effective barrage came from the Coast Guard cutter No. 400, commanded by Alexander Conor, who was skipper of the cutter that fired on the Black Duck.

NO WARNING SHOT

The Yvette June was launched at Fall River last week. Because of her special engines and equipment she had drawn federal suspicion. As soon as she put out last night from Sakonnet river, east of Newport, a warning radio was flashed to New London and five coast guard patrol boats were ordered to shadow her.

Capt. Rico de Nadal of Fall River, skipper of the speedboat, said today:

"We were fired on without warning by three Coast Guard cutters which trapped us in the mouth of the river. There was no warning shot. Our first warning was a one-pounder which pierced the pilot house. Then we were raked from both sides and a third patrol boat fired from our stern. The only way we could save ourselves from the one-pounders and machine gun bullets was to lie flat.

"The firing was so violent and shocking that I was unable to handle the wheel."

CHASED BY GUARD

Former U. S. Dist. Atty. Joseph Fitzpatrick of Providence appeared as counsel for the five members of the crew. He said the firing by the coast guard patrol was unwarranted and that the constitutional rights of the prisoners had been violated when they were subjected to a third degree examination that lasted for hours.

He claimed they should have been arraigned at once.

The prisoners were arraigned in this city.

They are: William de Nadal of Tiverton, said by the coast guardsmen to be owner of the boat; his brother, Rico de Nadal of Fall River, the skipper of the craft; Charles Dasil Blackman and Melo Lazzarone both of Newport, and Emile Larcheveque of Fall River. A sixth member of the crew is missing.

The Coast Guard cutter 400, out of Newport, was cruising off the mouth of Sakonnet river east of Newport harbor just before daybreak when she sighted the Yvette June.

The cutter signalled the speedboat to halt, but the latter, according to the coast guardsmen, defiantly raised a smoke screen and dashed for the river.

Connell, a veteran in such emergency, ordered a barrage from the cutter's one-pounder and machine gun.

Missing 10 Days

Miss Marguerite M. Callahan, 17-year-old Somerville high school girl, has been missing from her home at 9 Willoughby st. since July 4. Today her parents appealed to police for aid in locating her.

GIRL, 17, AMONG MISSING

Miss Marguerite M. Callahan, 17, a Somerville high school girl, has been missing from her home at 9 Willoughby st., since July 4, the police were informed today.

The girl's parents, Mr. and Mrs. John S. Callahan, said she disappeared after having worked two days in Belmont. They thought she might have gone away while despondent after having been told she was not adapted to the work at which she was employed. She is described as being 5 feet 4½ inches tall, with dark brown eyes, dark brown hair worn shingled, wearing a brown dress, with white stockings, black satin pumps and white straw hat.

TEETH IN NECK KILL SOLDIER

Washington, July 14 (AP)—Private Olaf Nelson, of Fort Bliss, Texas, died at Walter Reed Hospital early today after five unsuccessful attempts to extract from his esophagus artificial teeth he swallowed last Saturday.

The 30-year-old soldier, who was rushed across country in an army ambulance plane in a vain effort to save his life, died at 7 o'clock from suffocation. The dental bridge caught in his throat while eating breakfast at the Texas army post.

Doctors had feared septic pneumonia or a general infection, but neither developed. Surgeon-General Patterson of the Army and Dr. James F. Mitchell, Washington surgeon, had decided the patient could stand no further probing for the teeth until he had regained strength.

Nelson was completely exhausted yesterday after Maj. Roy Brown and other Army surgeons tried for two hours to remove the obstruction.

ATTACK IS MADE ON GILLETTE BONUSES

Counsel for Stockholders Declares a Half-Million Illegally Paid

Between the years 1924 and 1929 Gillette Safety Razor Co. directors were voting themselves bonuses in excess of half a million dollars, according to testimony offered in superior court today.

It was during this period that the stockholders were deprived of their just share of the profits, the minority stockholders allege in their $21,000,000 suit.

William G. Thompson, counsel for the minority stockholders who are plaintiffs in the suit against the group of directors who managed the affairs of the company during that period, offered this testimony from a mass of records of the company.

Frank J. Fahey, Ralph E. Thompson and Thomas W. Pelham, three directors who managed the company's affairs, were the principal beneficiaries of the bonus awards, Attorney Thompson declared.

The records introduced today in court showed that the bonus awards had been made because of the "fine work" of the three directors.

"I have examined the legal status of these bonuses, and I have discovered that they are clearly illegal," Atty. Thompson declared.

Counsel for the defense asked that the remark be stricken from the record, but Judge William M. Prest allowed it to stand.

FLIERS WAIT IN SHIP IN SIBERIA

Moscow, July 14 (AP)—Joseph Lebrix and the two French fliers who started with him from Paris on a non-stop flight to Tokyo were waiting in the middle of Siberia today for another ship to bring them back to Moscow.

Their ambitious project ended last night in disaster when something went wrong with their plane, "The Hyphen," and the three of them—Lebrix, Marcel Doret and Rene Mesnin, their mechanic—bailed out in parachutes and landed in the rocky foothills of the West Sayan mountains, almost halfway between Paris and Tokyo.

Lebrix asked that another plane be sent out to bring them home, but the brief messages which have come from him have not disclosed the identity of one of the fliers who was said to have sprained an ankle —the only casualty of the adventure. The Hyphen was wrecked.

Franklin, N. H. Mayor Weds

Hanover, N. H., July 14 (AP)—Mayor Dennis E Sullivan of Franklin, N. H. and Miss Olive Esther Marshall, daughter of Mrs Catherine Marshall, of Manchester, were married today in St. Denis Church.

THE REST OF THE NEWS

Berlin, July 14—While the German parties are fighting each other with increased fury the women members of all parties have concluded an alliance for co-operation regarding women problems.

In a statement today the chairman of the Senate Finance Committee and the co-author of the Smoot-Hawley tariff bill said:

"It is a strange thing, but it appears absolutely impossible for the average Democrat to give a Republican credit for doing anything constructive regardless of how patent or meritorious it may be."

U. S. Must Pay Up for Europe, Shaw Asserts

London, July 14—George Bernard Shaw, Irish dramatist, believes America will have to produce the funds that will save Europe. He stated:

"Europe has been heading toward the present situation for a long time. Nations cannot go on paying enormous war debts. The creditors are painfully aware that, once the moratorium becomes effective, the suspension of payments will continue through eternity.

"What will happen is that America will have to produce the money to save Europe."

Mrs. Moody was in Chicago on her way East on her campaign to regain the tennis crown which she once relinquished.

Epstein's Genesis Big Drawing Card

London, July 14 (INS)—Genesis, much-reviled latest product of Jacob Epstein, the famous American-born modernist sculptor, is proving England's best art draw.

And incidentally the grotesque statue of a woman in child is taking an amusing revenge on Lord Lee of Fareham, who married Ruth Moore of New York and who offered to head a subscription to send Genesis to Brazil. For Genesis is touring the country collecting sixpences from thousands who want to see her, and giving the money to help preserve ancient buildings, historic monuments and historic houses, thus mothering the artistic achievements of the past.

Curley Frames a Program to Take Care of Jobless for Years

CITY PLANNING BOARD WORKING OUT DETAILS

Arranges to Have Construction Lap Along From One Job to Another

Today, on instructions from Mayor Curley, the City Planning Board began drawing up a program of public works which will be extensive enough to provide employment for all able bodied citizens.

The program will be drawn up, legislative acts passed authorizing the work, money made available, and then the projects will be permitted to wait until such time as unemployment again becomes serious. As soon as lay-offs begin on present projects city officials will be in a position to award contracts and jobless Bostonians will be given a means of earning a living and supporting their families.

CURLEY TELLS HIS PLAN

In a communication to the city planning board the mayor wrote:

"The latent awakening on the part of President Hoover to the fact that America must assume leadership in the world, and incidentally in America, is today generally accepted.

"The belated tender of a one-year moratorium is unquestionably the mattress now being laid for a complete abrogation at a later date, possibly before the next election, of all foreign debts due to the United States.

"The effect of such a program should speedily result in the development of industrial and commercial activity throughout the United States and mark the ending of a depression which wise and courageous leadership at Washington could have long ago ended.

PREPARE FOR FUTURE

"Nevertheless, it would appear the part of wisdom to plan a program of public work for the protection of the citizenship in the event of future depressions, and incidentally safeguard municipal revenues from a system of dole as destructive to the individual as it is to the city treasury.

"Under the circumstances I trust your board will develop a program of public works that may be embarked upon in the event that at some future time the American nation may again be leaderless nationally."

FARMER FREED IN $20,000 BAIL PENDING TRIAL

Boundary Row Blamed in Killing; State Official Opposed Bail Granting

Brunswick, Me., July 14—Fred P. Ring, 70, former state representative and alleged pitchfork slayer, charged with first degree murder, was released in $20,000 bail today for appearance at the September term of Superior Court.

Judge Joseph H. Rousseau admitted Ring to bail after he had pleaded not guilty to the murder of William L. Philbrok, also 70, his next door neighbor on Hacker rd., and had waived examination.

STATE PROTESTS BAIL

Arrangements for his release were made at a conference prior to arraignment, between Judge Rousseau, County Atty. Walter M. Tapley, Jr., and former County Atty. Ralph R. Ingalls, counsel for Ring.

Ingalls contended that Ring could not be convicted of a first degree murder charge, and Judge Rousseau agreed to bail over the opposition of the county attorney.

The small courtroom was crowded when court opened at 9 o'clock, but Ring was not brought in. John Ring, his 13-year-old son, who witnessed the murder, and who the police say assisted his father in hiding the body, was also absent. He was permitted to return home after his father's arrest.

The body of Philbrook was held at an undertaker's parlor awaiting the decision of the county authorities regarding an autopsy.

BODY FOUND IN THICKET

Harry Gall, who works on the Philbrook farm, notified the authorities yesterday that his employer had been missing since Sunday afternoon.

Police Chief Edwards started a search, which revealed the body hidden in a thicket. It was discovered by Roland Call, 14.

According to the police, Ring and Philbrook have been at odds for some time over the boundaries of the Ring farm. Philbrook sold the farm, which adjoins his own, to Ring. Both men claimed land which each contended was on his property, police said.

The feud flared up Sunday and, according to police, the two aged men engaged in a pitchfork battle in which Ring was victorious. It is claimed that Philbrook had threatened his son John.

GIRL BELIEVES IN SIGNS, BUT—

Miss Althea L. Shattuck, Brookline society girl and artist, found the winds of justice tempered by mercy in municipal court today.

Miss Shattuck parked her car—inadvertently, she told Judge Joseph Zottoli—in a cab stand across from the Park Street Church in Tremont st.

"Didn't you see the sign?" the judge asked.

"No, your honor," said Miss Shattuck, with becoming humility. "From where I was parked the sign was not visible."

"All right—case placed on file," Judge Zottoli said.

STATE TO BOOST SPEED LIMIT

The speed limit of 20 miles an hour which has been in existence for many years on the boulevards under the jurisdiction of the Metropolitan District Commission, will shortly be increased to 30 miles an hour to conform with the new law which goes into effect tomorrow on all state highways.

William E. Whittaker, secretary of the commission, said today that the commission is revising its motor vehicle rules and regulations and the new code will be approved within two weeks' time.

In connection with the new speed law on state highways, a timely warning to motorists was issued today by Registrar of Motor Vehicles Morgan T. Ryan.

"The new law will be no excuse for failure to operate motor vehicles in a safe manner," he declared. "It effect, it requires operators to exercise better judgment and for failure to do so, they will be held strictly accountable."

The changes in the law are as follows:

Outside of thickly settled or business districts, raised from 20 miles an hour to 30.

In thickly settled or business districts, raised from 15 miles to 20 miles.

Where operator's view is obstructed on approaching or traversing an intersection or going around corners or curves, raised from 8 to 15 miles.

DOG NIPS THIEF IN WILD CHASE

Despite the persistence of two boys and a dog who chased a hold-up man along Harrison ave. nearly four blocks, the thief escaped in the crowd near Essex st., shortly after he robbed the manager of the chain store at 260 Harrison ave. of $40 in cash.

The robber entered the store last evening, walked to the counter, behind which stood Michael Cummings, of Francis st., Roxbury, manager, and suddenly pulled his hand from underneath his coat. A white handkerchief covered his right hand, that held what Cummings believes was a revolver.

In answer to a command from the robber, Cummings stepped to the cash register and passed over all the bills in the till, amounting to $40.

As the bandit backed out of the store two boys, Cermalo Aliscio, 12, of Harrison ave., and Andrew Trozzi of 244 Harrison ave., came along with Trozzi's dog, Duke.

Duke, set upon the robber by Andrew, caught his clothing several times and attracted considerable attention, but was finally repulsed when the robber gave him a kick.

BUS RAMS AUTO; TWO INJURED

Methuen, July 14—An elderly man and wife suffered critical chest injuries in Lowell blvd. near the Dracut line when a 30-passenger Maine to New York bus rammed their car from behind.

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph H. Spencer of Bristol, Pa., were taken to St. John's Hospital, Lowell, by Frank Pfeifer of West Circle, Pa., member of the same tourist party. Edgar Spencer, son of the 65-year-old man and his wife, who was driving the car, escaped unhurt.

According to Pfeifer, whose car was ahead of the Spencer automobile, a child ran across the road ahead of the Spencer machine. Pfeifer said he jammed on the brakes, causing young Spencer, immediately behind, to stop abruptly. The bus crashed into the rear of the Spencer car, throwing Mr. and Mrs. Spencer against the front seat of the car.

The bus careened to the side of the road, halting at the edge of a 30-foot drop into the Merrimac River. None of the 12 passengers aboard the bus was injured. J. L. Faulkner of Hartford, the driver, was badly shaken up.

At the hospital Mr. and Mrs. Spencer were said to have suffered grave chest injuries, the nature of which could not be determined until X-rays were made.

Tulsa, Okla., July 14 (AP)—Will Rogers has made a flying trip from California to add his personal plaudits to the praise which has been heaped upon Wiley Post and Harold Gatty since they completed their record-breaking flight around the world.

"Gatty," the humorist said, "was educated in the Australian Naval Academy. He came out to find Australia had no navy. You can readily see what a bright boy he was as a youth.

"'Where's the Navy?' he asked.

"'You're a navigator—find it,' they told him. That's the only thing he's never been able to find.

"He was a navigator and so he came to America. There's no other country with as much air and not knowing where it's going as this country.

"I'm glad he joined up with Post to make this trip, but it would have been better for the country if he'd joined Hoover. Hoover hasn't seen land since he took off. That's nothing detrimental to our President—he just hit bad weather.

"Post used to be a farmer. It wasn't ambition that drove him away from the farm, it was the Republican administration. Not all of the farmers took the air, but all of them had to eat it."

SPEED IN AIR SEEN AS VITAL NEED OF U. S.

This is the first of a series of three interviews with Lieut. Al Williams, former ace flier of the U. S. Navy. Lieut. Williams discusses America's air needs and the future of aviation.

By KENNETH CLARK
Universal Service Staff Correspondent

Rome, July 14—Speed!

That's what America needs to round out its aviation development and bring the United States up to par with Europe in the air.

This is the studied opinion of Lieut. Al Williams, former crack American Navy flier, who is making an inspection tour of Europe's air centers.

AIR RACE OFFICIAL

Not only was Williams a speed champion, but he was one of the navy's greatest stunt fliers. He resigned from the service more than a year ago and is now European director of the national air races, which will be held in Cleveland from August 29 to September 7.

While in Europe he has arranged for seven countries, Germany, England, Italy, France, Austria, Poland and Czechoslovakia, to send representatives to the races. Another country, Spain, may participate.

One of Williams' ambitions is to win the Schneider cup race, the blue ribbon of international seaplane competition. While he can not enter this year, he may try to develop a machine which will enable him to compete under American colors two years hence.

Unless speed is stressed, Williams told Universal Service, aviation cannot reach its full measure of development in the United States. He said:

600 MILES AN HOUR

"Aviation means speed. If there were no possibility of speed in the air it would be only fair to admit it and consider aviation merely as a hobby instead of a powerful agent of commerce and a most formidable aid to national defense."

Whereas American planes are developing around 200 miles an hour, European air experts, Williams said, are already designing planes capable of a speed twice as fast.

And Europe, Williams said, is never going to be satisfied when the 400-mile mark is reached, for Europe today is emphasizing the necessity for speed.

America must follow suit, he warned, or be outstripped by Europe in the air.

(In the second interview tomorrow, Lieut. Williams discusses America's need for a new type of airplane engine.)

Smelling Salts for Germany

—By ARTHUR "BUGS" BAER—

Trying to figure the international situation will make you dizzier than a piano mover on a circular staircase.

All of Germany's former enemies are trying to save her from a fate worse than debts.

Twelve years ago they were trying to hamburger her without onions.

The pendulum has swung back and knocked the cuckoo right out of the Swiss clock.

The way it stands now is that Berlin will borrow from any friend and hasn't an enemy in the world.

The Hoovertorium seems to have arrived too late to be of practical use. We meant well. But so did the old lady who sent flowers to the other old lady who was very sick with hay fever.

We are still suffering from the most peculiar war ever fought. Nobody started it, everybody got into it and nobody can get out of it.

And bankers are realizing that the debt holiday may be a holiday but it's no picnic.

WIFE DUPED AS SLAYER HANGS

Toronto, July 14 (AP)—Asserting his innocence until the last, Abraham Steinberg was hanged today for the murder of his nephew, Samuel Goldberg.

The Steinberg case had been a center of legal and popular interest for more than a year. A prolonged fight was made in an effort to save his life.

The effort continued right up to last night when Mayor Steward telephoned a plea to Premier Bennett.

As Mrs. Steinberg and her eight children waited last night in hope of a last minute reprieve the telephone rang. A man told her he had just arrived from Ottawa with an order commuting the sentence to life imprisonment.

"I'll be over in a few minutes," the hoarse told the mother and children and they were still waiting when the black flag rose above the prison walls.

Ask yourself this question: "If—right here, right now—I had before me a tall glass of water, generously laden with pure, sparkling Boston Ice—and if, between long, refreshing sips of its glacial coolness, I could hear the friendly music of the ice clinking against the glass—wouldn't it work a pleasant miracle on my state of mind generally? And wouldn't it work another miracle on my fickle appetite, at my next meal?"

MOTHER CLINGS TO RUDY AS END NEARS

nation poured in by telegraph—messages in marked contrast to those of a congratulatory nature that flooded in on him when announcement of his marriage was made a week ago.

William Lynch, brother of the dying woman, and his daughter were enroute from Concord, N. H.

Elmer Dow, who went to school with Rudy and drove his car during the celebration in his honor here last summer, called at the home to offer his condolences.

The telegraph messages remained unopened. Rudy could not see Dow. He did not leave his mother's side. He lay through the long night and the morning on a cot that had been moved into his mother's room and placed beside her bed. His right arm spanned the intervening space and his right hand clasped her left.

BRIDE IS ILL IN NEW YORK.

This was a different homecoming than he had visualized.

It was a different homecoming than the town had planned upon hearing of his marriage to Fay Webb, beautiful actress.

The bride was not even here. She was in New York, alone, sick.

Words that have turned out for Rudy's homecoming before were missing. There was no mob battling to be near him. Curious motorists drove into the dead-end street in which the Vallee home is located, and drove out again.

Rudy's father asked that state troopers be placed at the head of the street to keep them out tonight, if Mrs. Vallee should survive the day.

Rudy had his breakfast—a cup of coffee—on the cot beside his mother, wearing pajamas and dressing gown. He was tight-lipped and the strain etched lines in his face.

The gray-haired woman whose hand he held was the woman to whom he has given every credit for fame and fortune.

LIKE A SPRING OF LIFE.

There was more than a physical bond in the handclasp.

"Don't leave me, son," Mrs. Valley cried.

"No, mother, I won't," Rudy promised.

And for hours he has not. Mrs. Vallee was beyond further conversation, although she remained conscious, taking a few drops of water at intervals during the night.

The curly-haired lad who went out of this little Maine town to conquer, first Broadway, then the nation, with his voice, his megaphone and his band, was far removed from the king of song. There was no song in him. Only fears. No "Heigh ho, everybody!" in that room. Only silence.

The nurse remained with him in the sick room during the night. Dr. D'Arche came at 12:30 this morning and stayed until 7:45. Rudy's father and brother and sister got a few hours of rest, taking turns.

Rudy was hurriedly summoned home by his father. He was told it might be too late if he didn't come quickly. He chartered a plane from New York, and with his younger brother, William, arrived in the hamlet late last night.

Rudy came back to the tree-shaded white house in Munroe ave. He greeted his father and bounded up the stairs to his mother's room on the second floor.

"Mom, this is pop," Rudy's father told his wife.

"Yes, I know," she whispered, and there is Hubert and William."

Rudy is known as Hubert by his mother.

KISSES MOTHER.

The stronger knelt down beside his mother's bed, kissed her and held her hand, and cried.

Rudy, William, a daughter, Kathleen, and her husband, Prosper Lennville and Mr. Vallee kept an all-night vigil at the bedside of the 61-year-old woman.

But it was Rudy the woman wanted to see. Rudy her boy, her baby. The son she inspired and prayed for and planned big things for.

To this woman Rudy frankly admits he owes all his fame and success. It was she, he says, who helped him over the rough spots and urged him on and on.

"I knew mother was ill, but I never realized she was so seriously ill," he told reporters whom he saw briefly.

"There is very little to say. Nothing to say. I am glad that I could get home in time."

Rudy was obviously worried. His face was drawn. It was lined with worry. He had just come down stairs into the living room.

He didn't expect to see the press. He wanted to be alone with his thoughts.

Food didn't appeal to him. He couldn't eat. He wanted only to sit beside his mother. To hold her hand, to be with her constantly, and his companionship temporarily stimulated her.

SMILES AT HER SON

"Mother, mother," he sobbed. "I love you. I've come home to be near you."

The sick woman smiled feebly at her famous son.

She had so much to live for now and life was slowly slipping.

Rudy's father told of a contemplated European trip they expected to make had his wife's health permitted it, but now it was a disappointed thought.

"She had much to live for," he said. "Rudy was such a good son. He thought of his mother always. He telephoned daily to inquire after her health. We spent last winter in New York with him, but Mrs. Vallee's health necessitated her return to Westbrook.

"We had planned to spend the winter in the South and to go to Europe, but now ..."

And his voice trailed off.

Day and night nurses have been in constant attendance upon Mrs. Vallee. Rudy gave orders that no expense be spared in doing all that was medically possible in saving his mother's life.

Last Saturday a consultation was held between Dr. D'Arche, Dr. Mortimer Warren and Dr. Drake. Yesterday an emergency operation was performed on Mrs. Vallee. It proved partially successful, her husband said. It returned her to some degree of rationality. He added she had been irrational for several days.

Mrs. Vallee is suffering from high blood pressure aggravated by septic poisoning of the kidneys.

Rudy, young and prosperous-looking, was tear-eyed when he met reporters.

He was reluctant to talk about his mother. It seemed a sacred thing and he seemed almost afraid to comment on her dying condition.

But he said he had cancelled his personal appearance over the radio, Thursday night, and his scheduled appearances on the Pennsylvania Hotel roof, where he plays nightly at the dinner and supper sessions.

"I was rehearsing, too," he added, "for George White Scandals which is to be offered in about four weeks. In that production I do about everything, a little of this and that, including comedy, singing, band leading and straight monologue.

BRIDE "PRETTY SICK GIRL"

"I shall remain in Westbrook as long as it is necessary. My mother, of course, comes first, now. First, before everything else.

"You know my wife, too, is not well. She is a pretty sick girl. You know for one brought up in sunny and warm climate, the weather in the East is almost unbearable. Last week the humidity and disagreeable weather played havoc with my wife. She is extremely delicate and not very well. Because of her coloring and type, she is deceptive as far as health is concerned. She looks very well, but she is a pretty sick girl.

"She couldn't make the trip either by train or plane. She isn't strong enough for it. I brought her East because I thought she would be happier with me, despite the weather conditions, than without me."

Brother William remained silent during the conversation. He watched his brother, Rudy.

TWO WOMEN FANS MEET

Miss Frances Feist, of Hanover, Pa., president of the Rudy Vallee Round Table Club, a national organization composed of the crooner's admirers, is a visitor at the home of Mrs. Edwin B. Carr, another member and a neighbor of the Vallees.

She had never met Mrs. Carr until their mutual admiration for the entertainer drew them together by correspondence. She came on for a vacation, drawn partly by her desire to see the Vallee home and meet the Vallees.

By coincidence she arrived yesterday by train at about the same time Rudy won his airplane race to be home before his mother died. Save one woman, a neighbor, Rudy made the trip from Scarboro Airport to his Westbrook home, under police escort, without public detection.

WHAT'S A BROKEN LEG? SHE SAW RUDY

The desire to see Rudy Vallee, her radio idol, landed Elvira Cirigliano, 17, of 22 Sylvia st., Medford, in the hospital. Miss Cirigliano was pushed by the crowd at the airport to see the radio crooner land by plane in front of a truck and knocked down. She was taken to the City Hospital with a broken right leg. At that she's happy for she saw her favorite.

'RED FLAME' IN MILL STRIKE IS HUNTED

Pawtucket, R. I., July 14—Orders to pick up on sight Ann Berlak, "Red Flame" of the textile strikes here and in Central Falls, were issued today to Central Falls police.

The orders came from Chief George Collette of Central Falls, following a report that the blonde communistic leader, "invited" yesterday by police to leave Central Falls, had been seen there today.

Officers, in a general order, were instructed to take her into custody and bring her before Chief Collette.

PAWTUCKET MILL OPENS

A "break" in the strikes came today when two departments of the Royal Weaving Mills in Pawtucket reopened, and when, at Central Falls, a meeting presided over by Mrs. Anna Weinstock of Boston, U. S. Department of Labor conciliator, moved to bring about a settlement of the Central Falls disturbance tonight.

At the meeting, Casimir Wachta was appointed a committee of one to round up the 20 members of the strike committee for a meeting tonight in Central Hall, 46 Central st., where negotiations will be opened looking toward settlement.

Although President of the Board of Aldermen John F. Connelly, acting mayor of Central Falls, was invited to today's meeting, he failed to attend.

GUARD FOR COMMITTEE

Police protection for the members of the committee of 20, to and from the hall, and while in session tonight, was guaranteed by Police Commissioner William MacKenzie.

With the return of 108 workers in the cotton and spinning departments it was felt today that the backbone of the strike had been broken at the Pawtucket mill.

Everything was peaceful as the two mill departments opened and Joseph Ott, general agent of the mills, announced that he would reopen Mill No. 7, the silk department, tomorrow, if he received enough telephone calls from workers today, stating that they would go back.

NO PICKETING

Although there were 70 police stationed in the strike area, their services were needed only occasionally to keep some group moving, and there was no disorder.

The only stir in the otherwise quiet atmosphere came when two men were arrested.

One of the arrests was for loitering and the second was that of a man declared to have made comments while a group was being taken to police headquarters for questioning.

The arrests came just before a heavy downpour of rain drove both strikers and police to cover. The downpour was of brief duration, however.

The nearest attempt at picketing came at the time the 108 workers were going into the mill. A file of approximately 150 men and women passed along the opposite sidewalk, but the file did not stop and police did not molest the marchers.

Meanwhile, it was indicated the situation in Central Falls, where there were three strike riots last week, probably will be settled shortly.

The unheralded appearance there last night of Mrs. Weinstock, was hailed with relief by striking workers who are opposed to the Communist leaders of the strike.

Before the night was over a committee of strikers had been organized and today they and Mrs. Weinstock were to meet mill officials in the first step toward a peaceful settlement of the strike.

TROOPER REMAINS

It was stated that state troopers would continue to guard the Central Falls mills today. They expect to remain on duty until the question is settled.

The citizens' committee which will meet mill officials and Mrs. Weinstock today consists of Frank Adamski, chairman; former Councillor John Roberts, secretary; Peter Clare, Joseph Klucznick, president of the West Side Polish-American Society, and Casimir Wachta, president of the Pawtucket Polish Club.

Putnam Mill Closed in Answer to Strikers

Putnam, Ct., July 14 (AP)—The demand of 500 strikers of the Edward Bloom Silk Co. for shorter hours and more pay brought an order today from Edward Bloom, owner, closing the plant indefinitely.

Bloom arrived here this morning to confer with Francis Metcalf, plant superintendent. Metcalf said after the conference that Bloom had refused to consider the strikers' demand.

Meanwhile strikers were preparing for a mass meeting in St John's Hall later in the day to act on a detailed list of demands. Strikers expected Ann Berlak, leader in the recent strike disturbances at Central Falls, R. I., at the meeting.

Representatives of the National Textile Workers' Union said revised list of demands would include reduction of working hours from 55 hours a week to 48; increase of 10 per cent in wages of night employes; varying increases in pay for other employes; abolition of fines imposed for carelessness in work; recognition of the employes' mill committee and abolition of the four-loom system for the one-loom plan.

Today, in the real estate columns of the Classified Ads, you will find scores of opportunities for profitable investment.

Small Fish Litter Sands of North Shore Beaches

The Metropolitan District Commission today had men busy on North Shore beaches from Point Shirley, Winthrop, to King's Beach, Swampscott, cleaning up the last of the tiny fish that littered the sands, evidently driven in by the presence of some large carnivorous fish off the coast.

So frightened were the small fish, mostly silver hake, that they swam away from the finny menace until they were high and dry on shore.

BOSTON LINKED WITH ARREST IN PLOT

Philadelphia, July 14 (AP)—A man said by police to be a member of a gang of alleged extortioners who intended to force money from hotel managers and professional men and women, is under arrest here today.

The prisoner gave his name as Theodore Krzyzanowski, 42, of Camden, N. J.

Detective Capt. John Creedon said that the prisoner, who has a wife and four children in Camden, directed an organization known as "The W. T. R. E. Association," with offices in Boston, New York and Chicago.

The scheme was, Captain Creedon said, to send letters demanding sums of money from hotel managers, bankers and others, under threat of blowing up their buildings. They also tried to extort money from actors and actresses. Peggy Hopkins Joyce complained to New York police that she received such a letter, Creedon said.

GREEN FAVORS PARLEY TO KEEP UP WAGE SCALE

New York, July 14 (AP)—William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, in an address here today, urged President Hoover to call an industrial conference to maintain the present wage scale.

After mentioning what he called "serious social unrest" in coal mining regions and in textile districts of the South, Mr. Green said:

"It is not good for a republic when workers are clashing with the police. We are now facing a third winter of unemployment. Our nation has never been put to that test before."

The labor leader said the present depression was worse than the panic of 1893.

"Is there any economic reason why the millions of working men in America should take another reduction in their earnings? Have we not suffered enough? This subject is not debatable with the American Federation of Labor. Our minds are not even open to it."

TOUGH OLD BIRD 'TORTURED' BY DIAMOND

Troy, N. Y., July 14 (AP)—Grover Parks, a truckman, testified in Supreme Court today that Jack Diamond, gangster chief, assaulted and tortured him because he would not reveal the location of a whiskey still in the Catskill Mountains.

Diamond is being tried on a charge of assault.

Parks turned his eyes on the gangster, who had been listening intently.

"That's the fellow, in the black tie," Parks responded, pointing his finger toward the slim gangster, who returned his scrutiny and tapped on the table before him with a pencil.

TOUGH OLD BIRD

"Tough old bird," Parks said Diamond observed after Parks had been beaten and his feet burned.

"Then they threw the rope over a tree and pulled me up by the neck," Parks testified. "Diamond said to hold me there until I became unconscious."

Parks said Jim Dalton, Diamonds, chauffeur, and a girl were with Diamond when Parks was stopped on a mountain road near Catskill, April 15. The state holds the girl was Marion Roberts, New York show girl, who was indicted with Diamond but never arrested.

WARMED HIS FEET

The witness, a truckman with a business taking him between Albany and Catskill, said Diamond remarked:

"We'll warm his feet."

They did, Parks continued, using his socks as a bonfire. John Scaccio, Parks said, jumped on his bare feet. He was kicked and cuffed by both Diamond and Scaccio, one of the Diamond gang, he said.

"The scars are still there," said Parks, pointing to his face and neck.

All of this, he explained, was to force him to reveal teh location of a still, which he said, he did not know.

RULE OF CAPONE SEEN FADING

Chicago, July 14 (AP)—The Herald and Examiner said today that the impending overthrow of Al Capone's underworld supremacy as a result of the federal government's prosecution was apparent in his failure to usurp control of the Chicago Cleaners' and Dyers' Institute.

The gang chief is reputed to have begun a campaign to force his way into control last spring, but encountered strenuous opposition from the cleaners.

Dr. Benjamin M. Squires, chairman of the Institute, said yesterday that Capone, since his convictions of income tax fraud and liquor law violation, has abandoned efforts to take over the Cleaners.

Man Killed as He Gropes for Loaded Gun in Darkness

Stamford, Ct., July 14 (INS)—Reaching into the blind attic of his home to get a gun, Edward Gore Dunning, artist, met death.

The gun became caught in an electric light fixture and was discharged as Dunning pulled it toward him.

So Dr. Ralph W. Crane, medical examiner, today announced after a careful investigation into Dunning's death, which occurred last night as Dunning and J. M. Lozano prepared to drive to a beach to bathe. Dunning announced he would first try to kill some woodchucks that had been destroying his garden.

Hathaway Gin Case Again Postponed

Fall River, July 14—The case of Joseph P. Mayes, alleged to have sold a bottle of liquor to Elliott R. Hathaway on the night he murdered Verna Russell, student nurse, today was continued until next Tuesday.

Mayes was to be heard in court today, but owing to the absence of Vernon V. Galvin, Hathaway's friend who helped him consume the liquor, the prosecutor asked that time be allowed to permit the government to locate the witness.

Eight Killed in Plane

Moscow, July 14 (AP)—Eight Russian Army officers were killed in an airplane accident near Albino, about 30 miles from here.

LOAN URGED TO PROVIDE JOBS

By PATRICK J. SULLIVAN
Republican Representative in Congress from Pennsylvania
Distributed by Universal Service

Washington, July 14—I observe that Mr. Hearst struck the true logical and practical solution of the present depression by his proposal of a $5,000,000,000 prosperity loan.

I have observed the dole system in its best, and its worst phases and I know that it does not promote prosperity, but creates in the people a dependency, which is nothing other than a mental disease which must be cured before an era of prosperity will dawn upon us.

An increased and burdensome taxation to reduce the national debt, at a time when taxation is already overburdensome, would aggravate conditions instead of proving a remedy.

The only feasible plan, and the one which must be put into operation to alleviate the unemployment situation, is an enormous public works program, where the working man will receive a prosperous and honest living wage, whereby the confidence of the people in their government and in their plan of capital and labor will be restored. The government must take the lead by an increase in the public debt, and expenditures on a huge public works program.

FARM BUREAU'S FOR GRAIN BAN

Washington, July 14 (AP)—Legislation to restore speculative trading on grain exchanges again will receive the support of the American Farm Bureau Federation in the next Congress.

The bureau has been behind the Capper-Dickinson bill. The measure will be reintroduced next winter and provides for limitation of any one operator's trading to 2,000,000 bushels a day and his long or short position to a similar amount.

President Hoover's arraignment of speculators who sell short in times of stress has brought demands for restriction. The grain futures administration of the Agriculture Department also favors the Capper-Dickinson proposal.

Chester H. Gray, Washington representative of the bureau, in outlining legislation in which it is interested and which probably will come before the next Congress, said amendment or repeal of the agricultural marketing act, creating the Farm Board, undoubtedly will be actively considered.

$100,000 Damage by Blaze in Westford

Milked YESTERDAY

...on your table TODAY

24 hours fresher

Yes, some milk does taste better than other kinds. Try Brookside and you'll see what we mean.

The minute you take the first delicious draught of Brookside milk you'll get it. A fresh, new milk richness and flavor that's like a breath of pastures and cool gurgling brooks. Yes, it tastes fresher because it is fresher—by 24 hours—than most delivered milk in Boston.

It was milked yesterday in Vermont on one of the 1300 farms that are models of cleanliness and sanitation. It was pasteurized, bottled and iced within a few miles of the farm at the Bellows Falls Co-operative Creamery. It was shipped last night and it is ready for you this morning—a fresh New England product.

By the way—we almost forgot to tell you—that richer, creamier taste comes from its unusually high percentage of bone and muscle building elements.

Try it and you'll agree—no amount of money ever bought a better quart of milk.

ZIONISTS LAY PLANS FOR NEW LEADERSHIP

Basel, July 14 (AP)—The Zionist Congress took an eight hour adjournment today to enable the political commission and the steering committee to reach final decisions regarding the future leadership of the Zionist movement.

Meanwhile, the plenary session voted $1,350,000 as the income for the next year as against an expenditure of $1,800,000, the difference to be derived from extraordinary income.

The congress also adopted, by a vote of 87 to 74 a minority resolution offered by the Revisionists, disapproving of the spirit of the renunciation of the national ides by the administration of the Hebrew University in Jerusalem and instructing the Zionist executive to safeguard the national spirit in the university's administration.

The vote on this resolution was marked by a stormy scene. Eliezer Kaplan, Palestine Laborite, who was presiding when the education commission brought in the minority resolution, rebuked Dr. Chaim Arlosoroff, Palestine Laborite, who shouted across the hall that the vote was a cultural disgrace and a violation of academic freedom.

As an outgrowth of yesterday's disturbance when the Zionist flag was torn down, Abraham Lang, chairman of the Basel Revisionist Organization, was tried by the Congress court and suspended from all Zionist activity until January 1, 1932.

3 CENTURIES IN BASTILLE FETE

Paris, July 14 (INS)—A parade "three centuries long," swinging down the Champs-Elysees at 8 a. m., made Parisians rise early today to usher in a three-day celebration of the 142nd anniversary of French independence.

The Bastille Day procession took the form of a retrospective pageant of French colonial troops. Led by General Gourraud, the one-armed military governor of Paris, 1500 soldiers, dressed in uniforms of all colonial periods gave the vast boulevard the most colorful aspect since the peace parade in 1919.

First came the 1914 contingent wearing khaki. They were followed by a retrogressive kaleidoscope of military styles, the modern and relatively sober uniforms being succeeded by vivid colors and fanciful accouterments.

Zouaves of 1860 in red pantaloons, grenadiers with towering shakoes, 18th century fantassins in white buckskin breeches and, as a rear guard, musketeers in drooping befeathered sombreros and flaring top boots, the garb of colonizers around Louisiana lagoons in 1680.

Kennett displayed two pictures of donkeys. One was labelled "Kansas Wheat Farmer" and the other "Farm Board."

Baton Rouge, La., July 14 (AP)—Police here and in New Orleans today investigated the decapitation of Earl Miles, New Orleans youth, on the theory that his recent marriage to a foreign girl led to his death. The slain youth's brother said he thought Earl had been slain by hired killers, who took the head as proof of fulfilled contract.

FALSE BEARD IS FLAT FAILURE

New York, July 14 (AP)—"Take off those false whiskers," said a policeman to a man in the police line up this morning. "We know you, Edward F. Warrington."

It was indeed Warrington. But he denied he had donned false whiskers and help up the Cranbury, N. J., bank Sept. 5, 1930, and escaped with $1600.

The only thing Warrington, who was arrested at his home last night, would admit, was that he had violated his parole from Taunton, Mass., after serving part of a sentence for robbery and assault.

'SUICIDE' NOTE TELLS OF HUB 'MURDER'

Joseph B. Noonan, 30, World War veteran of 20 Forbes st., Jamaica Plain, is believed to have drowned himself at Montreal today while temporarily deranged.

His clothing and a suicide note indicating he was laboring under the delusion that someone suspected him of killing his mother—who is alive and well—were found on a wharf on the St. Lawrence River.

He was, until recently, an inspector of sewers for the public works department of Boston. He went into the Veterans' Hospital at Bedford for two months for treatment of a nervous disorder resulting from his war service with the 2d Cavalry. He was discharged from the hospital two weeks ago and went to Canada for a rest.

In the note was written:

"I assure you people I never killed my mother as God is my witness—and I am about to face him. There wasn't a lovller or finer woman."

His mother, who lives with three other sons and three daughters at the Jamaica Plain address, was prostrated by the tragedy.

She had received a postcard from him from Montreal Wednesday. On it he wrote that he was feeling well.

LOST LOVE SUIT, BUT WINS MAN

New Bedford, July 14—Mrs. Ellen F. Archer, 26, an attractive divorcee who lost her suit against the $150,000 estate of her wealthy employer, Frederick S. Brightman, with whom she claimed a secret love pact, eloped and married July 4, she revealed today.

Her husband is Charles F. Weld, 65, an United States customs inspector here. They met two months ago, his courtship was rapid, and they left over the holiday to return man and wife, it was learned.

Like Weld, Brighiman was many years the bride's senior. In her suit against the estate, she charged she was Brightman's fiancee and that he died two weeks before their intended marriage.

The new Mrs. Weld asserted at the hearing that she worked for Brightman for 17 years and that they became engaged when his wife died four years before him. She said he agreed to give her his $15,500 home and a big part of the estate.

MURDERED PASTOR'S WATCH FOUND

District Attorney Dougherty's Theory Is That Mrs. Beazeley Knows Much About the "Choir" Mystery

"THE MURDER OF THE CHOIR SINGER"

BY ANTHONY ABBOT

AS SOON as Flint trudged out of one door Dist. Atty. Dougherty plunged toward us through the other.

"This is the biggest case in years, Thatcher!" was his greeting. He ran a red forefinger irritably around the inside of his collar. "The newspapers are going crazy about it."

Colt smiled with something like the fraternal affection of an elder brother.

"And the man who makes good on it can be governor," he supplemented crisply.

Dougherty looked at him suspiciously.

"Just how do you mean that?"

Colt waved it airily aside and immediately told me to read from morning's events. When Dougherty learned that Gerald Curtainwood was meeting the famous criminal lawyer, Colonel Alexander Powell, on the arrival of the Vanhaven, he became as excited as when a watching scene a strange Airedale coming down the street.

A CLEVER MIND

"Alexander Powell," repeated Dougherty. "Huh! I went to law school with that old swellfish. He's not such a hell of a smart lawyer—he's not afraid of him."

Colt looked serious.

"He'll give us trouble," he predicted. "She'll fight every step of the way."

"Hell," repeated Dougherty, "I'm not afraid of him."

I then resumed the reading of my notes. Dougherty's bulging blue eyes seemed visibly to protrude farther as Colt explained the the airplane expedition to New Rochelle.

"Hell and hot water, things are popping!" he affirmed, wiping his red face with a handkerchief. "We certainly are getting somewhere, aren't we? Now, come on—"

At that moment Captain Israel Henry entered and asked Colt in talk on the telephone—one of Lengel's men at the Beazeley factory wanted to speak with him.

Colt listened for a moment and then said briefly: "We are coming right up there."

When he turned toward Dougherty again the Commissioner's eyes were glistening with excitement.

"One of Lengel's men just telephoned from the factory. The watch and ring of the murdered man have just been found in Mrs. Beazeley's bureau."

TRAFFIC TOUGH

Neil McMahon drove us from Police headquarters to the home of the late Reverend Timothy Beazley, D. D. Curiously, the only delay on our journey was in a traffic tangle half-way down the block from the Federal Trade Acceptance Bank, of which Gerald Curtainwood was a vice-president. As he leaned back in the car, Colt looked at the white marble facade of that conservative and highly respectable institution and smiled.

"There," he said, "is the tabernacle of one highly successful 20th-century deity. To me it is often an interesting cause for speculation—what will be the chaeologists of 5000 years from now think about New York? They are likely to make the most grotesque mistakes. Naturally, they will assume that our finest buildings were used for worship. The ruins of our banks will certainly be regarded as the remains of our temples. Nor will they be far from wrong.

"We hold our banking standards much more sacred than any religious responsibilities. In fact, a bank like Curtainwood's there always seems to me like a religious edifice, with the tellers as priests guarding the holy of holies, which is the vault, and the depositors the faithful, chanting the litany and carrying their catechisms, in the form of passbooks."

"What's that got to do with these murders?" demanded Dougherty impatiently.

Just then Neil managed to swing far out on the left-hand side of the street and shoot ahead of the blockade.

GETTING SOMEWHERE

"It looks to me as if we are getting pretty near to something definitely, Thatcher, if Mrs. Beazeley had those trinkets in her bedroom. Don't forget she tried to put suspicion on Saunders, too. Gerald Curtainwood lied about where he was last night. Paddy Curtainwood has a mania for dissection, and secretly Gerald sent some object of clothing out of town to be cleaned."

"You did not mention Isabel Saunders, her father or the cat," reminded Colt quietly.

"Just the same, it all adds up to something," insisted Dougherty, "and my idea is that Mrs. Beazley is pretty deep in it. Her manner last night didn't strike me right at all, and you know as well as I do that the female of the species is more deadly than the male."

"I have never been sure of that," retorted Colt. "It was said by a poet, not a scientist."

Dougherty snorted.

"The scientists have had a lot to say about it," he argued. "Judge Joseph Fields says that the average weight of women criminals is greater than in law-abiding women. The food is shorter and narrower, the thighs are bigger in proportion to the calves, the cheek bones are more prominent. Check all that up with our widow. Moreover, the female criminal lives longer than the male criminal, she has greater powers of resistance, she is more self-composed than, and she stands punishment better. Her insensibility to physical or mental pain is notorious."

Colt was spared the necessity of a reply, for at this moment we drew up in front of the Church of St. Michael and All Angels. Before us was a disconcerting spectacle. Swaying and surging on both sidewalks as far as the next corner were deep-shaw crowds of morbidly-curious people.

Half-way down the block the police had stretched ropes to keep the sidewalk clear in front of the church rectory. They were now doing their best to keep the crowds moving, but were encountering difficulties.

Who these people are—these men and women with nothing to do, who haunt the scenes of crimes, accidents and disasters, and who for want of more exciting fare, will stand and watch for hours the construction work of an office building—has always baffled me.

Like buzzards gathering in the sky, they swoop down where something has been spilled or other outrage befallen. There they stand, stubborn, empty-eyed, apparently instructed by any pressing business to call them from the scene.

Colt called the lieutenant in charge of the police detail and demanded that the street be cleared of people at once, telling the officer to call reserves, if necessary, to break up what he considered a disgraceful spectacle. With Dougherty and myself following, he then started up the brownstone steps, when the door of the house suddenly opened, and Inspector Lengel ran down the steps. He looked excited and somewhat dismayed.

"Trouble inside, Mr. Commissioner."

"What's up, Lengel?"

"About half an hour ago Gerald Curtainwood showed up with a lawyer."

"Powell?"

"That's the name. He had just landed from Europe an hour ago. Right away he tried to order all the police out of the house. He said we had no right there. He demanded our warrant. Made us stop searching. We can't do a thing. I tried to talk to him, but he can't be bluffed."

Dougherty cleared his throat.

"I'll talk to Powell," he said. "He won't put anything over on me."

He again started up the steps, but Colt detained him.

"I think we better get the situation straight in our own minds before we get inside," he remonstrated in a low voice, and, turning back to Lengel:

"Where is Mrs. Beazley?"

"Sick in bed, prostrated, trained nurse, won't see anybody except Col. Powell. She was here quite enough," chafed Lengel, indignantly.

"Where is the watch and where is the ring?"

Lengel's lips curled.

"Powell tried to make me give them back, but I held on to them. Here they are."

Into Colt's hands Lengel passed two objects each wrapped in a silk handkerchief.

Desiring to escape the observations of the reporters watching from across the street, Colt led the way into the vestibule where he carefully unfolded first one of the handkerchiefs, and then the other. Lying exposed on his palm was a watch of white gold with radium figures painted on its silver dial. The strap was of light brown pigskin with silver buckles. Colt examined it intently.

"What did Mrs. Beazley say about this watch?" he asked.

"I couldn't talk to her," Lengel explained.

Colt looked at Dougherty.

"I gave particular instructions," he explained, "to have the abrasion on Beazley's wrist photographed with a microcamera. I have not seen the prints, but I carry in mind a clear image of that mark on the dead wrist. I believe Beazley wore this watch when he died. Let's go in."

Does the recovered wrist watch help Colt trace the murderer? Read Monday's exciting instalment.

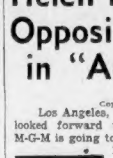
Victor J. Morris Tells of Favorites

Helen Hayes Given Lead Opposite Ronald Colman in "Arrowsmith" Film

By HARRIET PARSONS

Copyright, 1931, by Universal Service, Inc.

Los Angeles, July 14—That nice rest to which Helen Hayes looked forward when she completed "Lullaby" recently at M-G-M is going to be curtailed shortly. But something tells me Miss Hayes will climb out of her swimming pool without a tear—for she'll have the lead opposite Ronald Colman in "Arrowsmith" as an inducement. The Sinclair Lewis story of an idealistic young doctor's struggle to adjust himself to the less lofty aspects of his profession should offer rich screen material, and since Sidney Howard is doing the adaptation it is assured of intelligent and sympathetic treatment.



Harriet Parsons

"Arrowsmith" has a poignant love story, and the part of Leona, which Miss Hayes will play, is ideally suited to her personality and talents. You'll recall that she is one of the foremost young actresses in the American theater and that she came to Hollywood under contract to M-G-M to make her film debut in "Lullaby."

Sam Goldwyn has arranged to borrow her for "Arrowsmith," which goes into production August 1. John Ford will direct.

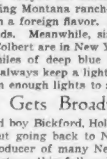
* * *

When—and if—Paramount lures Gary Cooper back to his native shores, he'll play opposite Claudette Colbert in "Sal o' Singapore." Maybe the studio figures they'll be able to tempt the wandering Montana rancher to return if they promise him a picture with a foreign flavor. He's apparently developed a taste for far lands. Meanwhile, since Ed Sloman, the director, and Claudette Colbert are in New York and Cooper still abroad, three thousand miles of deep blue sea stand in "Sal's" way. Well, Gary, we'll always keep a light burning in the window for you—in fact, even enough lights to spell your name!

Bickford Gets Broadway Offer

Big, bad boy Bickford, Hollywood's red-headed he-menace, is talking about going back to New York. Jed Harris, eccentric, youthful producer of many New York hits, will put on Eugene O'Neill repertory this fall and has made Bickford a tempting offer. Harris will do "The Hairy Ape," "Anna Christie," "Desire Under the Elms" and others and he wants the fiery-thatched actor. Bickford, you know, won acclaim for his performance of O'Neill characters on the Broadway stage before he entered pictures. If he accepts he will leave August 15. Meanwhile he may do another picture for Universal, for whom he has just finished "East of Borneo."

Young Richard Cromwell, much publicized as the boy Cinderella when he leaped from obscurity to fame overnight in "Tol'able David," hasn't had a moment's breathing spell lately. Funny about Cromwell. After his big hit in "Tol'able David" he sat around and twiddled his thumbs, on the Columbia lot for eight months. Then suddenly the wheels started moving again and he found himself dashing from one picture to another. He jumped from "Fifty Fathoms Deep" straight into "When Hell Broke Loose" and now Harry Cohn plans to put him right into "Guilty Generation," the play which Cohn originally planned to produce on Broadway.



Richard Cromwell

'Tis with mingled feelings of relief and regret that I turn this column back to its rightful owner. It's been work—but it's been fun, too. A pinch hitter's job is apt to be a thankless one and I'm therefore vastly grateful for the kind way in which my efforts to hold down the fort has been received. Thank you—and you—and you here. So surrender the typewriter to L. O. P. who has a swell coat of tan and a new glint in her eye. And now, if you'll excuse me, I'll take an aspirin tablet and a long nap!

Sterling Hits at Scollay

At the Scollay this week a sterling stage show has quality and quantity. Gay, swift-moving entertainment, with an abundance of singing and dancing plus a generous portion of riotous comedy, sums up the variety program.

McKay and Ardine, headliners, meet modern requirements with a clever offering. Geraldine, one of the finest acrobatic dancers in America, stops the show, while the Sinclair Twins display a brand of peppy dancing seldom seen before, and Edgar Sturtz does her share to make this act most entertaining.

Close runners-up are Christy and Nelson.

Getting the bill off to a fine start is George Wilson and his Punch and Judy show. Frank Jenks and Margie are next in some clever hoofing patter to be followed by Guiran and Marguerite in "Dance Television." A pantomimed treat. King and Burnett with their harmony songs are excellent. McKay and Ardine and Christy and Nelson next come on, while Downey and the Claridge Sisters round out an exceptionally good vaudeville bill.

"Way Down East"

"Way Down East," with thrilling sound effects, and the original orchestra accompaniment tracked on the film itself, will be presented at the Repertory Theater tomorrow. Popular prices will prevail and "Way Down East" will be presented continuously at the Repertory for one week from 1 to 11 p. m., with Sunday presentation beginning at 3 p. m.

Marion Davies Filmdom's Most Popular Girl, Says Manager of Orpheum

By HARLEIGH SCHULTZ

Marion Davies, brightest of the screen's light comediennes, is the most popular girl in Hollywood! Marie Dressler, soon to be started on an all-dramatic tarring career, is the colony's downer queen. Greta the Gnat is truly the Inscrutable, filmdom's sphinx, a princess of ife and love in the realm of the lights and shadows, but a perfect mystery of love and life outside the studios! Even Hollywood's cleverest folk cannot fathom her; for any flapper, to go completely Garbo, would necessitate her shutting up like a clam in all personal activities.

Such are a few of the personality gems mined by a good friend of ours during a month's stay in and around the studios of the West Coast recently. As to the manager of Loew's Orpheum, pondered a few minutes, and then offers as his selection Clark Gable, who has been in a dozen pictures in the last 12 months, and now so popular that M-G-M people are eager to play opposite him as he begins his starring career. Mr. Morris saw this strikingly good performer at work on one of the lots, and was personally impressed by his looks and ability.

Cosmopolitan, whose output is always distinguished by class, has a big program for its production this coming season, says Mr. Morris. Its first will be "Skyscraper Souls," and Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer is going to make 48 photoplays for the new film year, the new executive states. These will include Hall Caine's "The Christian"; "The Awakening," by John Van Druten; a drama, "Night Court," by Mark Hellinger, the columnist; "Red Headed Woman," by Bonton-Loos; "Arsene Lupin," "Three Wise Fools," Bayard Veiller's "Guilty Hands," "Honolulu," and "The Squaw Man." Sir Harry Lauder has been put on the dotted line to make a series of "shorts."

"I saw some of these big pictures in production, and my guess is that we're in for some banner stories, the thing the talkie screen most needs," said Mr. Morris.

"I attended a good many movie shows out there, and was surprised at the coldness of the audiences. Folks here in New England are hot by comparison; here we get splendid reactions to good acting, good pictures, but there the people seem blase; my store did 1 per cent more up, and it was when Clark Gable was on the silver sheet.

"One of the sights that made me smile was to see Marie Dressler breeze up the street—he had on red bloomers, the brightest red you ever did see! and for her it was no laughing matter—she seemed seriously sorry in her divided 'balloons.'

* * *

"One is struck by the strange inhibitions of the men—for instance, in such a combination is green sweater, blue beret, screaming red tie, gaily colored socks—as if the wearer had borrowed from all the members of the family, mother and sister included. The women? Ah, they're different — they know how to dress!"

Reopening of Hollis Will Be Discussed

At a conference to be held in Boston soon, the newly appointed trustees of the Robert Breck Brigham estate, which holds the Hollis Street Theater in a part, will discuss plans for reopening the playhouse for the coming season.

Exeter Theater

Clara Bow in "Kick In" and Bert Wheeler and Dorothy Lee in "Cracked Nuts" are the attractions for today and tomorrow, at the Exeter. The last half of the week Lew Ayres will be seen in "Iron Man." Lowell Sherman in "Bachelor Apartment" will also be shown.

On Esplanade

The program for tonight's Esplanade concert follows:

Military March	Schubert
Overture, "Leonore, No. 3"	Beethoven
Manuet	Boccherini
Overture, "Rosamunde"	Schubert
Prelude in C Sharp Minor, Rachmaninoff
Mephisto Night Music from "Faust"	Gounod
Waltz, "Espana"	Waldteufel
Ride of the Valkyries from "Die Walkure"	Wagner

Warner Baxter Heads Cast

"Their Mad Moment," is featured at the Public Beacon and Modern. Warner Baxter is a fiery Basque lover. Dorothy Mackaill has the role of a fortune-seeking American society butterfly. The story deals with the frivolous set of pleasure seekers who haunt the beaches, gambling casinos and luxurious hotels of southern Europe during the husband-hunting season. It is while engaged in his search that Miss Mackaill is attracted by Baxter, whom she believes to be a penniless peasant.

The co-feature, "Hell Bent For Frisco," is an underworld drama featuring Charles Delany and Vera Reynolds.

BOSTON EXPERT CORRECTS COST OF FREIGHTS

New York, July 14 (INS)—George H. Parker, transportation expert, retained by the City of Boston and Boston Port Authority, was called today to refute testimony offered some time ago by C. W. Pouder of Baltimore before the Interstate Commerce Commission in connection with New Jersey's fight against free lighterage in New York harbor.

Pruder, director of the export and import bureau of the Baltimore Association of Commerce, had cited the per ton cost of handling freight at various terminals in 1924 as follows: Boston, $1.85; New York, $2.75; Baltimore, $1.06; Philadelphia, $1.03; Hampton Roads, $1.05.

BOSTON AIDS JERSEY.

Boston is backing New Jersey in the battle to end free lighterage in New York. Parker said the Boston figure should be 98 cents per ton, instead of $1.85, as stated by Pruder.

Parker charged the $1.85 figure had been reached by excluding the cost of handling 315,000 tons of freight at the Commonwealth and Army Base piers in Boston by the New Haven Railroad.

LA ROE RAPS FIGURES

Wilbur La Roe, chief counsel for the port authority of New York, said Ponder's figures were grossly unfair to New York because they exclude all the rail switching at other ports and include all marine costs at New York. The effect, he said, is to show a deflated cost where service is rendered by switching and to inflate the cost where rendered by marine service.

W. W. McCoubrey, traffic manager for the Boston par authority, said:

"The Boston complainants say that the switching at Boston is exactly comparable to the switching performed on the Jersey shore from the classification yards to the lighterage piers."

JOBLESS VET BITES OFFICIAL

Beverly, July 14—Crying that he wanted work because of his wife and children in Italy, a war veteran beat and bit Commissioner of Public Works James W. Blackmer at the city stables in Park st. today.

The veteran is alleged to have struck Blackmer on the head with a pickaxe handle and then to have bitten the commissioner on a thumb.

Other workers in the stables rushed to the assistance of Commissioner Blackmer and overpowered his assailant. He was given over to police who sent him to Danvers State Hospital for observation.

The veteran first went to City Hall and asked for work, and when told there were no jobs available, went to the city stables.

Appeals Jail Term on Liquor Charge

George W. Comeau of Grant st., Cambridge, sentenced to six months in the house of correction and to pay a fine of $500 in East Cambridge court today for keeping and exposing liquor for sale on June 25, appealed and was held in $1000 for the Superior court.

Patrolman James J. Shea said that Comeau was seen coming out of a house in Belvidere pl., Cambridge. He picked up a jug of liquor, started to walk away with it and then dropped it and ran when he found the police were after him. Comeau denied he was the man who ran away.

Father, Daughter Face Same Court

Father and daughter appeared together before Judge Arthur P. Stone in East Cambridge court today for failing to stop their cars at intersecting streets. They were Mrs. Reesie Pozzner and Abraham London, both of Prescott st., Cambridge. oBth cases were placed on file.

Mrs. Pozzner was assessed $5 costs of court. Police said she woman failed to stop at Mystic and Chestnut sts., Arlington, and that 15 minutes later the father also failed to stop at the same place.

GRAND HOTEL

By Vicki Baum

"ALWAYS PUNCTUAL," answered Flammchen, and laughed regularly in a way that made her nose quite short like a baby's while her light brown eyes darted a side-long glance.

"Well, take a seat till then," said Preysing. "And have something. Waiter, give the lady something," he said tactlessly, and made his retreat.

Flammchen ordered a Peche Melba and nodded her head quite happily. Also she blew at her lock of hair, but without success. She was as beautifully made as a race horse and as natural in her movements as a puppy.

Baron Gaigern, who had been wandering about the lounge for a few minutes, looked at her from the distance with unaffected admiration. After a moment he went up to her and said in a low voice: "May I take a seat beside you? But surely you have not forgotten me? Didn't I dance with you at Baden-Baden?"

"Impossible. I've never been to Baden-Baden," said Flammchen, and took a good look at him.

"A thousand apologies. I see now, I must have made an error and mistaken you for someone else," cried the Baron hypocritically.

Flammchen laughed at this. "That's old stuff," she said dryly. Gaigern laughed, too.

"Well, let's drop that nonsense. I may sit here, may I? You are quite right. You could not be mistaken for anyone else. A girl like you is only seen once. Are you staying here? Are you going to dance this evening? Please—I should so much like to dance with you. Will you?"

He put his hands on the table. Flammchen's were there already. There was a little space in between his fingers and hers and the air in it began to vibrate. They looked at each other and the mutual attraction and sympathy were instantly complete between these two young and charming people.

"God Lord, you've got a way with you," said Flammchen, enchanted.

And Gaigern answered equally enchanted. "You promise then? You'll dance this evening?"

"I can't. I've work to do. But I'm free tonight."

"But bother it, I'm not. What about tomorrow? Or the day after tomorrow at five o'clock? Here in the yellow pavilion? That's settled then?"

Flammchen licked her spoon clean, and said nothing.

What was there to say in any case? You picked up an acquaintance as you lit a cigarette. You took a few puffs just as you felt inclined and then you trod it out.

"What is your name?" Gaigern asked meanwhile.

"Flammchen," said she promptly. Immediately upon this Preysing came up to the table with a proprietary air, and Gaigern politely made way for him by getting up and standing behind his chair.

"We can get along now," said Preysing irritably.

Flammchen extended a gloved hand to Gaigern while Preysing looked on with displeasure. He recognized Gaigern as the man who had come out of the telephone booth.

"Who is that?" he asked as he crossed the lounge at Flammchen's side.

"Oh, an acquaintance," she replied.

"Indeed. You have a number of acquaintances no doubt?"

"I don't complain. It doesn't do to make yourself too cheap. Besides I don't always have the time."

For some obscure reason this reply was comforting to the general director.

"Have you got a permanent job?" he asked.

"Not at the moment. I am looking for one. Well, something will turn up. Something always turns up," said Flammchen philosophically. "I should like best of all to get into the movies, but it isn't easy to make the start. If I could only make a start." She looked with a troubled and comical expression into Preysing's face. She was now like a young cat. All the charm of an animal appeared to meet in the changing expressions of her face.

Preysing, who was far from such perceptions, opened the door of the typewriting room, asking as he did so:

"Why the movies particularly? You are all movie mad."

Among the "all" was included his 13-year-old daughter, Babs, who adored the movies.

"Oh, as to that, I have no illusions. But I photograph well. Everybody says so," said Flammchen, and took off her coat. "Shorthand, or straight on to the typewriter?"

"Type it, please," said Preysing. He was now more lively and in better humor. He had rid his mind of the fact that Manchester had fallen through, and aa he took the first and still so very promising letters of this correspondence from his portfolio he felt positively happy. Flammchen was still taken up with her own affairs.

"I am often photographed for the newspapers and so on. Advertisements for soaps are made from me, too. How do I get on to that, you ask? Well, one photographer tells another. I'm very good in the nude, you see. But it's wretchedly paid. Ten marks a photo. Just imagine that.

MAN HELD FOR LOVE INQUIRY

Placide Boudreau, 30, was held in $1000 on drunkenness charges in Somerville court to permit police to inquire into suspicious angles of his intention to wed Miss Irene Xavier of Waldo ave., Somerville.

Mrs. Mary B. Xavier, the girl's mother, caused the arrest of Boudreau and a companion, Gilbert Pitts, whom she charged with having threatened to harm her. After wedding invitations had been issued, she said, she learned that Boudreau has a wife in Canada.

When he came to the house last night, she said, she confronted him with her knowledge and cancelled the wedding plans. Later, she said, the two men returned intoxicated and threatened her.

Pitts and Boudreau were arrested on the street. Pitts was fined $5 for drunkenness.

Although the wedding had been set for next Sunday, Boudreau had filed no intentions.

Pimples in Blotches Itched Terribly. Healed by Cuticura.

"I had pimples on my face, neck and arms. They were hard, large and red, and festered. They were in blotches and itched something terrible, especially in the warm weather. When my clothing rubbed against the pimples it aggravated them, and I could hardly sleep on account of the irritation. The trouble lasted over two years.

"I read an advertisement for Cuticura Soap and Ointment and sent for a free sample of each. They brought instant relief so I purchased more and in about six weeks I was completely healed." (Signed) Stephen Letsky, 3 Hall Pl., Worcester, Mass., March 25, 1931.

Good—they've got to be good!

Fred and Adele Astaire in Broadway's new musical hit, "The Band Wagon"

Darn good—you'll say!

Everybody wants a mild cigarette. And when you find one that is milder and tastes better too—you've got a smoke!

Chesterfields are so much milder that you can smoke as many as you like. They're made to smoke milder. And you know they taste better the moment you light up. They're made to do that too! Mild, ripe, sweet-tasting tobaccos—the best that money can buy. That's what it takes to make a cigarette as good as Chesterfield. And the purest cigarette paper!

Every Chesterfield is well-filled. Burns evenly. Smokes cool and comfortable. They Satisfy sums it all up!

THE DINING ROOM OF THE HOTEL WAS ALREADY half full of people when we arrived—women variously dressed depending largely on where they had arrived from or were departing to—men, mostly on the wrong side of avoirdupois, trying to appear at ease among the outnumbered. Why is it that women can look so smart and chic, even nonchalant, in a popular dining salon for lunch and men appear furtive and misplaced—we know, it is because they forgot to wear a camellia, or are thinking what a h—ll of a price a dollar and a half is for blueberries, crackers and milk, or maybe it was just the weather which made them look like a wet sock.

MISS ELIZABETH WELLS

To us lunching at a grande hotel is always an adventure, especially if the orchestra leader sees us and plays our favorite melody, and watching the people drifting in is so exciting. A tall, blond giant, resembling a lion, can conjure up a dozen romantic potentialities and a beautiful girl with an old, old man sets all of the curiosity glands working.

* * *

It was the end of a chase for us yesterday, this hotel, because we passed a zippy motorcar on Boylston st., with just the tip of an exasperating white hat showing over the tonneau—just the hat we had been searching for to meet the boat in—white straw, with the sauciest feather over one pearly ear. A white gloved hand waved to us as we passed and was around the corner before we saw who was under the hat, so we stepped on the gas, got caught at the red light, and drove up to the Ritz as the white hat and her blond escort were diving through the revolving doors. Parking was impossible so we drove around the block again and found a spot where we just know we would get tagged—we have never missed—but that hat was more important and park we did.

* * *

Favorite Returns From Europe

NOT FORGETTING TO MENTION THAT WE WERE also escorted by none other than the popular Peter Faneuil, we entered as quickly as dignity would permit, still intent on getting a peek at that hat. On the stairs we encountered Boston's most popular jazz maestro, and had a few words with him which netted us an invitation to dine—and please don't forget it, Mr. Ruman—had another few words with the head waiter, who was simply perverse and would not let us sit where we selected, parking us right in the middle of the salon where it wasn't a bit intimate—but at least we could see everybody and they us, and seated at the very next table was the white hat and one of the prettiest debs of last season lurking under it. It was Elizabeth Wells, lately, very lately, returned from Europe and paris unknown, lunching with her Yale swain, terribly aristocratic and all that. Miss Wells was dressed in white also, which accentuated her brunetteness and was a charming foil for the blond Boola.

* * *

MONDAY IS ALWAYS A chummy day in town, people driving guests up from the shore and coming in for a day's shopping, having the wave set after the week-end, an alluring sale at Mme. So and So's, or just a dash around with mother.

* * *

ISOBEL POTTER APPEARED with a gorgeous tan accompanied by a man, whom we suppose is her fiance—anyway someone would be proud to have him for such, as he was divine looking. Dorothy Preston, becomingly frocked in grey printed silk, and Virginia Taylor in a stunning brown ensemble were seated over in the corner chatting like mad. How we wished we had been a rose-bug with ears open seated in the heart of the rose which decorated their table?

Isobel Potter

WE OCCASIONALLY SPOKE to Peter, but we had explained before we went that it was to be a combination business and pleasure trip so we know he understood, because he looked most awfully amused all the time. Was it our fault if the place just kept filling up with the most beautiful women—the thought has just ocurred to us that perhaps he didn't even notice our inattention—anyway, we both concentrated on the most lovely lady we have seen for eons and we almost swallowed our blueberries whole until we found out who she was.

* * *

SLIM, TITIAN ENCHANTING, in chartreuse zephr-wool adoringly topped with hat to match. Mrs. Robert S. Harkness was the highlight of the lunch. We waved good-bys to Peter, tripped in to see an adorable artist whom we like—we used to pose for the such in the good old days although you would never believe it to see us now—dropped in for tea at the salon of a charming Oriental who does marvelous things with a camera which everybody simply adores until they see their own mask and then they get indignant, and home for supper with the cubs. Voila Tout!

Road Through John D.'s Land

White Plains, N. Y., July 14—A proposal to purchase or condemn a strip of land a mile and a half long on the estate of John D. Rockefeller was contained in a plan for a new parkway presented to the Westchester County Board of Supervisors.

The proposed roadway would go through the heart of the 10,000-acre Rockefeller estate and less than a mile north of the Rockefeller mansion. It would bisect a number of private roads and bridle paths on which Mr. Rockefeller has spent $1,000,000 in the last two years.

The plan involves an estimated expenditure of $4,000,000. Nine years ago a similar proposal was made but eventually was dropped.

Print Chiffons in the Mode

By ANN ARDEN

WHETHER, OR not your summer wardrobe has been completed, you will still want one of the newer printed chiffons. Colors and contrasts come and go, but the printed chiffon remains enthroned, since there is nothing more wearable, cool-appearing and refreshing.

* * *

COMPLETELY poised is the new large design of the costume pictured, the chiffon is printed in large discs, irregularly placed, toned cream and chartreuse on a black ground. The skirt is subtly flared, while the cape, topping the shoulders, crosses in front to form belt, fastened center back with buckle of brilliants. A little vestee and perky bow are of embroidered organdie.

* * *

HATS THAT are large, with broadly spreading brims, are ever the choice of certain women in the summertime, and the one pictured is of crin, chartreuse tone, banded in self-color patent leather, its wide brim tip-tilted, a flattering screen from the sun's rays.

* * *

THE SHOES and gloves are eggshell.

* * *

LENGTHS of skirts as standardized are running this way: For formal evening, heel length, for dinner ankle length, for afternoon midway of the calf, for sports about four inches below the knees.

To Visit Shut-ins

Every month two or more give a little time in visiting the Convalescent Home of the Children's Hospital, staying a few minutes with each child, and bringing a bit of sunshine into their lives.

This month, Miss Harriet Morse, last year's Vincent Club president, and the charming fiancee of Mr. George Sturgis, and Mrs. George P. Denny will visit the health-recuperating center, talking with the children while they display their toys, making each one glad that the hospital has this visiting committee.

The convalescent home is supported separately from the hospital, and the list of officers includes: Mrs. George Monks, Miss Mary B. Lothrop, Mrs. Horatio G. Curtis, Mrs. Henry S. Hunnewell, Mr. Samuel H. Hooper, Mrs. F. McD. Garfield and Mrs. Robert Amory.

Americans at Colonial Ball in Paris

By BARON GEORGE WRANGEL
Universal Service Staff Correspondent.

Paris, July 14—At last the unapproachable Faubourg St. Germain, holiest of holies of continental society's elite, is open to American and other foreigners.

No longer are the palatial portals of these ancient homes of the French aristocracy closed to the so-called "parvenu" from abroad.

According to one of the Faubourg's leaders, Comte Louis De Lasteyrie, the Faubourg now, as before the war of 1870, finds it "the thing" to receive foreign visitors.

An example of the change was the Bellenie De Beaumont ball, given in the heart of old Paris. Because of the Colonial Exposition everyone came in the costume of some colony.

Garden Party

Americans present included the Baroness Ferdinand Kurt De Pantz, nee Mildred Nelson, of Kansas City; Baroness Courgaud, the former Eva Gebhard, of New York; Mrs. John Munroe, Countess Zopola, nee Mortimer, of New York, and Countess Guy De Brissac.

Another event at which the fashionables appeared en masse was the annual garden party at the British embassy. Mrs. Walter S. Edge, wife of the American ambassador, wore printed mousseline de soie and a paison straw hat.

There also were Mrs. O. H. P. Belmont, Mrs. John R. Drexel, Countess De Viel-Castel, nee Anna Dillon Ripley; Mrs. T. Benley Mott and Mrs. Reginald Fellowes.

The last grand prix of the season was the greyhound race at St. Gemme. Many notables had tables entertaining for lunch. Among them were Mrs. Burke Roche and Mrs. Harriet Neal, who entertained 50 guests.

In Printed Chiffon

Mr. and Mrs. Anthony J. Drexel, Jr., also attended. Mr. Drexel had a dog running.

Others present were Madame Jacques Balsan, nee Consuelo Vanderbilt, in a white and black ensemble; Countess Abert De Mun, formerly Grace Cuyler, of New York, in printed chiffon, and Madame Paul Dupuy.

There also were Miss Anne Morgan, Baroness De Turckheim, the Maharanee of Indore, nee Nancy Miller, of Seattle, in a dark and blue ensemble, and Princess Ilynska, nee Audrey Emery.

ANN ARDEN will answer questions concerning clothes, social customs, or fashions generally. Address your questions to the Boston Evening American or the Boston Sunday Advertiser or to Station WAAB.

SENTIMENT ECONOMY A MODERN IDEA

—By Aldous Huxley—

THE WIND IS OUR SLAVE, the water does what it is told. Commerce has harnessed fire to work for man's profit and convenience. But there is also another force of nature, no less powerful than the rest for being subjective, no less natural because it resides within the mind of man himself—the force of sentiment.

Sentiment in the state of nature is like Niagara before the age of electricity: a torrent of profitless power. But the power can be impounded, the torrent led along economic channels and forced to turn the mills of trade. The harnessing of an important human sentiment is an engineering feat of the first magnitude and, when successful, almost limitlessly profitable.

Some of the sentiments have been harnessed since time immemorial.

Witness the Oldest Profession in the World. Others, no less important, have never been commercially exploited at all. Others again are only at the very beginning of their career as profit-making forces.

* * *

Mother's Day

For example, what cataracts of filial love ran fruitlessly to waste until Mr. Hering of Indiana, the Father of Mother's Day, laid down the pipes which now connect the hearts of American sons and daughters with the manufacturers of candy, the growers and sellers of expensive flowers! For the first time, so far as I know, in all recorded history the affection of the child for the mother has become an appreciable factor in a nation's commercial prosperity. I am only astonished that nobody should have thought of harnessing this natural force before.

* * *

Christmas, Advertising

Abolish Christmas, and the shopkeepers of Europe and America would lose a substantial proportion of their profits. And yet how recently did Christmas become the economically precious institution it now is! That classical Christmas described by Dickens in the Pickwick Papers is remarkably unlike the Christmases of the present day. There is no hint of a tree (the tree was imported from Germany by the Prince Consort) and, much more important, no hint, beyond Mr. Winkle's promise of five shillings to Sam Weller, of Christmas presents.

The sentiment of good will had not yet been profitably canalized. People contented themselves with eating and drinking together; the habit of buying things to give to one's friends had not yet become general. At some time during the nineteenth century benevolence was taught to express itself in terms of presents. A natural force had been harnessed. Industry and commerce were greatly the gainers.

In the Latin countries this harnessing of the Christmas spirit is actually going on at the present time.

Advertisement digs out the channels; sentiment obediently flows; the mill-wheels of trade have already begun to turn.

* * *

Flowers, Funerals

In the hierarchy of human feelings the sentiments which have reference to death are particularly important and have been harnessed in a great variety of ways. A whole treatise might be written on the economics of death and bereavement.

I can do no more than record a fact, hazard a guess and a generalization. In one of his books the French historian Michelet notes that, in his youth (he was born in 1798) nobody used to put flowers on graves but that when he was middle-aged this expression of natural piety was universal.

It has remained universal. The florists have effectively harnessed bereavement. And yet, in spite of their gains, I should guess that the amount we spend on death is less in proportion to our income than the amount spent by our ancestors.

Our sepulchres, at any rate, in the Anglo-Saxon countries (for Italian cemeteries are still museums of sculpture), are less elaborate and costly than in the past. We spend less trying to immortalize ourselves, but more on our condolences, more in the immediate expression of bereavement.

The facts seem to point to a simultaneous increase on the one hand of sensibility, on the other of rationalism.

After

I kept no cherished token of
The memory of that old day
When I prepared a house for Love,
In hopes that he would stay—

And Love went on—with pilgrim guise—
It all was ended, long ago;
But what is there in some blue eyes
That still can hurt me so?

A Ballade of Herbert Hoover

By Oliver Herford

Was ever a man with such collosal heart
(And nerve) as this? You may recall how he
To feed the Belgians cabbage a la carte
Tore billions from the U. S. Treasury.
Moratorium's now on his tapis,
To succor London, Berlin, Paris, Rome;
Dear Mister Herbert Hoover, can't you see
A Moratorium begins at home.

He has two faces, focussed worlds apart
Like Janus of the old mythology;
One face smiles o'er the sea, through tears that start,
The other views his own land's misery
And turns away. "Too bad, but not for me,
Private subscription must the country comb."
Deaf to the Unemployed, the Farmer's plea
A Moratorium begins at home.

Is it a stroke of Politician's art?
Of smart electioneering strategy
To buy next Fall in the Convention's mart
The German and Italian vote, maybe?
Or is it just the Psychic Density
Of one who has no spare-room in his dome?
For the humanitarian verity
A Moratorium begins at home.

ENVOY

VOTERS who in your ballots hold the key
To a bright Sunrise or a Dismal Gloam,
Let your votes tell the Nation you agree
A Moratorium begins at home.

"How does this sound, gentlemen—The cigarette with that tobacco taste?"

True to Type

—By Gilbert Seldes—

I THINK I HAVE READ everything ever said by officials in charge of prohibition enforcement, and until yesterday I had encountered but one solitary announcement which had sense. It was the proposal, credited to Mr. Doran at the time, to poison all the drinkers. This was not, of course, the form used; although prohibition is much more important than life, an old prejudice against murder exists, a left-over from happier days. The suggestion was only that a fatal ingredient be added to alcohol, a chemical both powerful and undetectable, so that all those who drank would die, and no one who refused to drink would suffer.

* * *

Kill the Drinkers

I call this eminently sensible—the real politik of prohibition. It faced the facts, and, put into practice, it would have accomplished its end. For no matter how the amendment is phrased, its purpose is to put a stop to drinking, and how can you accomplish this more beautifully than by killing off the drinkers? Not since Dean Swift proposed a return to cannibalism, in order to relieve depression, has such a stern and sound doctrine been announced.

The sentimentalists in charge of our Government held back. There was talk of human rights and "the Government in murder"—all of which was beside the point. Either the Government wants to enforce the law or not! If policemen are allowed to shoot down gangsters, why should drinkers be exempt?

And now Colonel Amos W. W. Woodcock, Director of Prohibition, has brought forth the second bit of sense. (One intelligent remark every five years is par on the prohibition course.) He said, in effect, that the drinker must be left to his drink. In actual words he said: "We are compelled to leave him to his conscience." The director regrets it. He speaks plaintively of the drinker escaping punishment "because of the protection the law gives him." He says it is a pity. He says the private consumer is the real cause of the bootlegger's going to jail. But he will do nothing about it. He can't. The drinker, his drink and his conscience go into a huddle together, and when they have merged, the director sighs.

A Backward Step

Temperance, which began with the founding of the Republic, became active about a hundred years ago, and rose to its height in the 1870s and later under Miss Frances Willard. Prohibition is an outgrowth of Temperance, to be sure, but with a change in direction. The Anti-Saloon League looked to Law where the Temperance Movement looked to the individual and his conscience. So we are back where we started from, not wiser, but sadder men.

If you doubt this, read the account of the Nevada saloonkeepers who trooped down to the courthouse the other day and paid their fines for selling liquor and then rushed back to their bars to continue selling liquor. This isn't a new phenomenon; it was observed by Carrie A. Nation, in Kansas, two generations ago. Kansas was dry; the saloon was illegal. Kansas also was practical and wanted the revenue which other states derived from the sale of liquor. So Kansas instituted a system of monthly fines for violating the law; the fines were paid and, by a coincidence, amounted to about the same sum as the licensing revenue would have been. It was for everyone except Carrie A. Nation an ideal system.

In my opinion, it is the system which is most likely to emerge from the present muddle, if prohibition doesn't set in fairly soon. You may call it nullification or hypocrisy; its only serious defect is that it will probably not eliminate the bootlegger and the racketeer.

Discontent

—By F. Tennyson Jesse—

THERE IS AN OLD SAYING that "One half the world does not know how the other half lives." That is to say that the wife of a millionaire, stepping into her scented bath of a morning, has not the vaguest notion of the life of her kitchenmaid, or of her furnace man, who has arisen at an unearthly hour that her bath water should be hot.

She may stand to them for romance, or, if they are of a Bolshevik tendency, for tyranny, but at least they vaguely envisage something wonderful, polished, gleaming and perfumed which is the ultimate desire of mankind. She probably never thinks of them at all except when she is unlucky enough to possess them.

When we eat our morning grapefruit or bacon does there pass through our mind any notion of how these delightful and succulent things have arrived on the table?

Is our mind full of pictures of black men sweating by the dockside loading the grapefruit into ships? It is not.

Is it perhaps perturbed by the thought that on some farm in Denmark or Ireland or Wiltshire or Yorkshire, or in the pig-bearing states of America, an animal has squealed in pain and fear so that we should eat this most voluptuous of all foods—voluptuous not only because of its flavor, its scent and its texture, but (if we are poor people whose dining room is near to the kitchen by reason of the crisp sound of its frying, which things all go to make up its essential bacony.

* * *

Passionate Discontent

Again I reply that nothing like this passes through our minds. The manna from heaven that was granted to the Israelites was more of a miracle to them, although, after all, it merely consisted of a small fungus indigenous to the desert, than our grapefruit and bacon to us, despite all the sweat and blood and bills of lading and the many middlemen who have contributed to the final result upon our plates.

But to get through every hour of practical life would be impossible if at every moment one stepped to think by what miracle of human organization the common things of life fell into our hands—and a day laborer now has more luxuries than were known to Queen Elizabeth.

Something far more profound than mere thoughtlessness lies at the root of this ignoring of facts. A certain amount of selfishness and oblivion is necessary if we are to carry on life at all—at least on the basis of the saying, "One half the world does not know how the other half lives."

For the real meaning of that saying is that humanity is perpetually being torn in two—one part of it wants one thing and the other part wants precisely the opposite, and their only alikeness is in this passionate discontent.

* * *

The Divorce Battle

From one country there goes up a cry for easier divorce, from another goes up a wail (chiefly feminine, I must admit) for a marriage that shall be indissoluble.

Is it not an ironical reflection that the Nordic races spend the whole of the summer months trying to get the skin as dark a brown as possible, and that in America a large proportion of the population buys special creams for lightening the skin—that the Nordics endure the tortures of the permanent wave to make their hair frizzy, and at the same time this large proportion of the American race employs patent oils to make the hair straight?

Then take the question of fatness and thinness. Perhaps three-quarters of the world are trying to get thin, and one-quarter of the world is trying to get a little more flesh on its bones.

Certainly nobody is content to remain exactly as he (or more especially she) happens to be.

Ask any gynecologist of what his patients consist. Half of them are women who want to have babies and can't, and the other half consists of women who are going to have babies and don't want them.

It's a mad world, my masters, and nobody seems able to be happy, with curly hair, straight hair, and brown skin or white skin, a fat figure or a thin figure, a large family or no family at all.

In short every one wants something a little different from the thing he has, and his next door neighbor is striving also to reverse his condition.

What are we to deduce from this? A craving for perfection? Is all humanity stirred by the divine discontent? Without it should we all fall upon sloth and cease to strive? Perhaps. At least it is pleasant to think so.

Synthetic Swimming

They never heard of swimmin' holes
Beside a grassy lea
Nor ever smarted with artless souls
Beneath a willow tree.
They never trod an ocean strand
Nor heard the breakers roar
They never gambled in the sand
Upon a sunny shore.
But grins of rapture may be found
On every freckled mug
When city kids are gathered round
A gushing fire plug.

LIBERALS FORM PARTY TO FIGHT LLOYD GEORGE

London, July 14 (INS)—An independent Liberal party aimed at the overthrow of Lloyd George's leadership is springing up in the House of Commons.

Headed by Sir John Simon, this group is composed of Liberals who have recently withdrawn from the official Parliamentary Liberal party because of Lloyd George's surrender to the government on various issues including the question of double taxation.

Six or seven other Liberals, including the chief whip, are expected to join the new group.

The purpose of the rebels is not to cut themselves adrift from Liberalism, but to judge the government proposals in accordance with their convictions, and vote as they desire, not as Lloyd George demands.

Dissatisfaction with the tactics pursued by Lloyd George has existed among a section of the Liberal party for some time.

It reached a climax when Philip Snowden, England's "Iron" chancellor of the exchequer, first refused to meet Liberals with respect to the exemption of playing fields from the proposed land tax and subsequently spoke with open contempt of their surrender on the question of double taxation.

This was too much for such haughty Liberal veterans as Sir John Simon, Sir Robert Hutchison and Ernest Brown and they all announced their withdrawal from the official Liberal party.

SAVE DROWNING CHILD

Revived after being thought drowned on her first afternoon away from her mother, little Catherina Frances Cummings, 10-year-old Malden honor pupil, choir singer and violinist, was threatened today with pneumonia at Lawrence Memorial hospital, Medford.

The girl, daughter of Mrs. Bertha Pratt Cummings, a widow of 46 Clark st., Malden, was allowed by her mother yesterday, for the first time in the girl's life, to be away from home and mother for an afternoon.

While guest of a family living in Pine st., Malden, she went swimming with other children in Wright's Pond, Medford, and sank when beyond her depth.

The other children, missing her, notified Life Guard Peter Brandano, who dived several times and brought the unconscious girl ashore. For more than an hour Brandano with Patrolman Frank M. Brewster and Dr. J. Lawrence Golden, who was swimming at the lake, worked over the girl, and when they detected a spark of life, took her to the hospital, where she was revived.

Saved By Hero

Catherine F. Cummings, 10, of Malden, was saved from drowning yesterday at Wright's Pond, Medford. The child was taken unconscious from the pond by Life Guard Peter Brandano.

WEATHER BALKS OCEAN FLIERS

Harbor Grace, N. F., July 14 (AP)—Prospects of bad weather prompted Alexander Magyar and George Endres, Hungarian fliers, to postpone their take-off for Budapest today.

They said they would put in the day loading 630 gallons of gasoline, enough for 28 hours' flying time, into their plane, "Justice to Hungary," and would take off as soon as the weather cleared.

Endres said they ran into fog at Sidney, N. S., and flew blind for two hours.

"Dr. Kimball was right and we will certainly await his word before leaving Harbor Grace," Endres declared.

HERE'S WHERE LAW CASH GOES

Baltimore, July 14 (INS)—Approximately 70 cents of every dollar awarded in judgments in civil cases in New York city goes to pay the costs of the litigants, it was indicated in an analysis of 527 cases contained in a preliminary statement on a study of civil justice in New York issued today by the Institute of Law of Johns Hopkins University.

The statement shows that in these 527 cases the plaintiffs paid an average of $47 to collect $201 while the defendants spent $73.33 defending the lost suits. As a result, the total cost to the litigants of collecting each average of $201 through civil action was $140.33.

A large proportion of all civil cases are finally lost from the litigant's point of view, because the judgment is never collected, the statement shows.

R. I. Justice Weds

Providence, July 14 (AP)—Associate Justice Jeremiah E. O'Connell of the superior court and Miss Madeline Loretta Gannon of Cranston were married in that city this morning.

Lary met the actress while he was playing with Oakland in the Pacific Coast league and she was playing in the movies with Richard Dix. Since coming to the Yankees he has lived at a hotel managed by her father.

BOY MISSES DEATH TWICE

Plaistow, N. H., July 14—Louis Sargent, 17, of Pollard rd, had two narrow escapes from death while riding on Main st., Plaistow, Ewing machines forced him off the road the first time. He veered into a stone post and his car overturned but he was only bruised and shaken up.

A telephone call to his brother Everett brought another machine to continue the journey. The pair had just started when a huge limb from a giant elm tree crashed to the road in front of them. Telephone poles were brought down and the old land mark fell and it was more than an hour before the roadway was cleared and traffic resumed.

Mexico Cuts Expenses

Mexico City, July 14 (AP)—President Ortiz Rubio and his cabinet have decided upon a $7,500,000 reduction in governmental expenses as a means of meeting the economic crisis.

A GOOD VOCABULARY IS GREAT HELP IN GETTING AHEAD

By ROBERT E. ROGERS

DO YOU KNOW that the more words you have at your command the more successful you are likely to be? Or, to put it another way, the more successful you are the more words you are likely to have on hand ready for instant use.

ROBERT E. ROGERS

If you were to tell the old-style, successful, self-made man that high competence seems directly proportioned to vocabulary power, he would probably shake his head despairingly about the frills and fads that are creeping into business. Vocabulary and success, he might allow, go hand in hand in the case of politicians and college professors and ministers, and perhaps lawyers and bond salesmen, but you can't tell him that having a big vocabulary is a sign that you can run a business better.

Yet that is precisely what the modern business psychologists, personnel directors and the like are coming to believe. I received a letter the other day from a college graduate, as follows:

"I am an alumnus of ————, class of '31, and at present a member of the national organization of unemployed. I was applying for work at one of the industrial concerns here in Detroit the other day, and to test my desirability they gave me a vocabulary test comparable to the one used by Johnson O'Connor at General Electric.

"Not being well read (or just naturally dumb) I didn't do so well, and hence I am writing to you for suggestions. I would appreciate it if you would send me a list of books which are interesting and also at the same time instructive along the above line."

* * *

Vocabularies Are Important

What I wrote him doesn't matter for the moment. The point is that the people who hire men for jobs in big industries the kind of jobs where there is a chance for promotion, are very much interested in vocabularies.

You, perhaps, may have read Mr. Johnson O'Connor's recent article in (if I remember correctly) the Atlantic Monthly, describing the very interesting work which he is doing in Boston and at various educational institutions. For some years he has been testing the candidates for Stevens Institute, the famous engineering school in Hoboken, and recently the Massachusetts Institute of Technology has retained him for similar work in the department of business administration.

Mr. O'Connor has perfected types of tests to determine the fitness of a young man for his chosen field of work. He works out a test, for instance, at which successful engineers are found to be particularly good. Failure in the test would seem to indicate that a boy would do well not to choose engineering as his profession. Success in such entrance tests has been shown to correlate closely with later achievement in school so frequently as to allow the officers of the school virtually to promise scholarships in advance on the basis of these tests.

Mr. O'Connor believes that it is possible to work out tests which will show pretty exactly whether a young man ought to consider preparing for certain professions.

* * *

Executives Beat Professors

But where does the vocabulary come in? Mr. O'Connor tells us that each aptitude test is made up of several parts. Several of these parts vary with the particular aptitude being tested, but the vocabulary test is invariably present.

This is what Mr. O'Connor finds: That the superior and successful man, in whatever profession he is being tested for, has almost invariably a very high grade in his vocabulary test of 150 or 200 words. The average or mediocre professional man, judged by his reputation, the kind of work he is doing, his income, etc., is equally almost invariably weak in vocabulary. Furthermore, whereas the college professor usually ranks very high in vocabulary, as might be expected, the successful executive in any profession may be expected to rank a bit higher in vocabulary than the college professor!

Mr. O'Connor has tried this out often enough to make these findings, he believes, a general law. In one case of which I have personal knowledge he tried the test out on an extremely successful local engineer, recognized as a leader in his profession. The man got a clean 100 per cent on a list of 150 pretty difficult words.

In my work teaching English I have long ago come to the conclusion that the student who reads rapidly and accurately and can write well (both of which involve vocabulary) is almost certain to be a scholar of high standing in his technical and engineering work. An occasional exceptional man will do good professional work and still be incompetent in his use of words, but he is a rarity—and, usually, simply badly prepared.

* * *

Slow Reader Is Handicapped

The man who reads slowly, with difficulty and inaccurately, is always handicapped because he cannot master what he reads and is cut off from the most effective source of facts and ideas, reading. The man who has no words with which to express himself in speech or on paper is equally handicapped in getting his notions over to others. Hence he is cut off on two sides from success.

There are, of course, plenty of illiterate men who make plenty of money in business. But Mr. O'Connor is not talking about that kind of success. He is speaking of what we call success in the learned professions and of the real successes in business, i.e., getting to the top, into the executive positions of great industries. That involves something more than the kind of shrewdness, the poker-playing quality, by which it is often possible to make money in business.

I gave no list to the man who wrote me that letter. I told him simply to read—copiously, constantly, rapidly—the ordinarily difficult stuff in our better contemporary magazines and non-fiction books. A vocabulary is a matter of slow but constant growth. Without it you are enormously handicapped. You can't take in new ideas and you can't express to others such ideas as you have. That is why, in spite of the old-fashioned self-made man, one of the important differences between merely moderate success and a notable achievement may lie in the number of words you know thoroughly and can use effectively. Anyway, the idea is worth thinking over.

DAILY TRUE STORY

LITTLE DANCING LADY

MAMIE WOULD RATHER DANCE THAN EAT

SHE COULD remember distinctly when she was a little girl running around wild in the Cherry Hill district. Mamie Cooney she was then, daughter of a shiftless night watchman. Brought up by an aunt, she went to school and played in the streets. As she grew older the great question arose as to what she should do for a living.

Mamie solved that for her aunt she'd study to be a dancer. She'd rather dance than eat, and there wasn't a party ever given in the district that her talents weren't in demand.

In fact, it was long after her father had passed on that Harrison Towers happened to see her dancing at a political clambake.

Her lithe figure, her sparkling black eyes, her grace and winsomeness won his admiration.

He went up to her during a lull in the proceedings. "How'd you like to dance in my revue?" he asked.

Mamie didn't quite understand. He explained and her eyes lighted with wonder. "On Broadway?" She held out an impulsive hand.

Mamie told her aunt the news and the grizzled woman predicted the worst. In brogue flavored with the wisdom of long experience she warned her only niece against venturing into the haunts of the wicked.

Taking Chances
Aunt Expresses Fear

And as for Harrison Towers he was known from one end of the town to the other—his picture figured in the papers, his exploits were on every tongue and no girl was safe with him.

To all of which Mamie listened with ears that believed not. "If ya go," said her aunt, "I bid ya goodbye for poor as we are God-fearing, too."

"But it doesn't mean," pleaded Mamie, "that because I'm going to dance for a living that I'm going to the bad."

The old lady shook her head. "Better girls than you have fallen by the wayside," she said.

She stood like a Spartan when Mamie left. Harrison Towers saw to it that his newest acquisition got a place in the Revue and there she danced if not with the acclaim she had won on the East Side still with credit. Her salary was small but she managed to save a little and she studied and practiced.

Towers was watching her. She was always so gay, so full of the joy of living. He knew all about her, how defenceless she was, and he began gradually to single her out for attention.

Mamie was pleased flattered. The other girls in the show turned anxious eyes on her.

Towers took her into the country, to expensive inns and at last invited her to a petit house party.

Mamie went; she met a lot of interesting people, among them a serious eyed youth who drank more than was good for him. He made up to Mamie, took her by the arm and led her to the terrace where shrubbery and flowers formed a garden on the roof top.

Appealed to Her
Mamie Looked at Cartwright

"You're the most beautiful thing God ever made, little dancing lady," said Mr. Cartwright.

Mamie looked at him. There was something about him that appealed to her. She'd met plenty of men before and especially since she'd been dancing in the Towers Revue. Men young and old who had offered her dancers and bracelets and hinted at flats and motors, but somehow this man was different.

She looked at him as he expatiated on her charms, but there was something in her eyes that made him stop.

"I don't know why I am saying these things to you," he broke off lamely.

Mamie smiled at him. "That's better," she said, "isn't the view wonderful from here?"

Cartwright drove Mamie to the inconspicuous boarding house where she slept, ate and worked. "I'll drive 'round after the show tomorrow night," said he, "and we'll go for a ride."

Mamie took many rides with Cartwright after this. She did it because she was in love with him. But she kept her romance to herself, because she had learned all about the Cartwrights.

He had an allowance from a very rich father and he never had done a day's work in his life. Cartwright, Sr., had given him up.

"You could have come into the business," he said after one particularly raw escapade of his son, "and gone on with the work I've been doing, but too much college has ruined you—maybe you'll change, but it's hoping for a lot. I'll give you $90 a week because it's partly my fault. After the next scrape it'll be cut down to $200—it's all up to you."

Towers observed the growing friendship between Mamie and young Cartwright with a jealous eye. He had a contempt for his rival. Secretly he dubbed him waster and loafer, and, besides, he liked Mamie himself.

Mamie Warned
of Cartwright's Reputation

Foolishly he spoke to Mamie:

"See here, my dear, I think you're a little unwise to be going about so much with Cartwright—you know the reputation he has—of course it's your own affair but a word to the wise—"

Mamie thought it over. It seemed rather foolish to be falling more and more deeply in love with a man who had never so much as hinted that he wanted to marry her but unfortunately she couldn't help herself.

She resolved as a sort of test to see less of Cartwright. Towers was secretly jubilant. He regarded Mamie as a legitimate prize, one of his own finding and his motto had always been that any girl who wants to go straight has the decision in her own hands.

Cartwright took it upon himself to call on Towers. And he hadn't been drinking, either. He hadn't touched a drop for three weeks. Towers sensed trouble for Cartwright was always two polite.

"Look here," said he, "you know what I've come for—I want to know as man to man whether you've any intentions of marrying Mamie."

Towers stared at him. "My dear fellow," he said, "answering you in the same vein it's none of your damned business."

"I thought so," said Cartwright. "I'm interested because you see I'll marry her if she'll have me—and watch your step." He walked up close to the surprised producer, and there was menace in his eye—"I'm making no threats, but even if she won't have me now maybe she will some day—and if anything ever happens—there'll be no dancing girls where you and I will go together."

Having said this, Mr. Cartwright walked out of the office and straight to Mamie's room.

"Listen," he said, "I've something to tell you—but first will you marry me?"

Mamie gasped. "Me, Mamie (continued, oh yes, but on one condition."

Mr. Cartwright heard her through, then he took her by the arm, drove her to the office of his father in a downtown skyscraper.

"Father," said the young man, "permit me to introduce Miss (Cooney—she's promised to marry me on one condition."

Cartwright, Sr., braced himself and his face was grim but when Mamie had finished he was smiling. He got up and kissed Mamie. Then he turned to his son. "You can start in in the morning," he said, "your pay will be forty a week."

The tailor shop of Jacob Margolin on the second floor furnished the burglar nothing, but in the clothing establishment of Philip H. Davis the intruder doffed his worn suit and donned a new suit of modish garb.

When Morris Hamar of Salem st., Malden, employed in the Margolin establishment, entered the building to report for work, he met the intruder, who carried an armful of suits.

'FIN COM' HEAD SAYS LOAN PACT IS VIOLATED

New Plan, Goodwin Says, Is Against Judgment of Three Members of the Board

Construction of the proposed new Central Girl's High School from an appropriation of $2,000,000 was vigorously opposed again today by Frank A. Goodwin, chairman of the finance commission.

In a statement Goodwin charged the school committee is violating the spirit of the authorization by the Legislature to borrow the money outside the debt limit.

COMMITTEE PASSES MATTER

He added that the proposed construction of the high school was contrary to the best judgment of at least three members of the school committee.

At its meeting last night the committee again was unable to agree on a site for the school, and passed the matter over to a meeting next week.

With his statement Chairman Goodwin enclosed a report made by the board of schoolhouse commissioners to the school committee which strongly opposed the building of the high school at Worthington st.

Goodwin reviewed the history of the Worthington st. lot, which was purchased in 1922 for $100,000, and the attempts made from time to time thereafter by the school committee to decide on a new school.

He pointed out that last year, at a conference with the mayor and the finance commission, the school committee agreed to build two intermediate schools in the Gilbert Stuart district, Dorchester, and the Bennett district, Brighton.

OTHER SCHOOLS FIRST.

Notwithstanding the agreement two members of the committee voted against the intermediates according to Goodwin. The mayor then served notice on them if they did not vote to build the two intermediate schools he would have the law changed so that an appropriation could be passed by a vote of 3 to 2, instead of 4 to 1.

"At the next meeting of the school committee," Goodwin said, "the committee voted unanimously to appropriate the available money for two intermediate schools, but Messrs. Gray, Hurley and Reilly allowed themselves to be coerced by Mrs. Pigeon and Dr. Lyons into agreeing that the first high school project for 1931 would be the Central girls' high school.

"Mr. Hurley and Mr. Gray admitted at a meeting before the finance commission that they had made this political agreement, although they did not believe the Girls' high school should be the first one built."

Goodwin said the school committee building program for 1931 was thrown out by the Legislature and that of the finance commission, adopted in substance. This authorized the borrowing of $2,000,000 outside the debt limit for two high schols, but did not designate what schools should be built.

The authorization by the Legislature, he said, practically eliminated the building of the Central Girls' High School because it is impossible to build that and another high school within the $2,000,000.

SECRECY VEILS PLANS AS ZERO HOUR NEARS

Veteran Agents to Join "Students" in Crusade to Clean Up City

With their two weeks' schooling completed and prospects of thrilling assignments in the proposed great "liquor mop up" tomorrow, the "students" and a corps of veteran prohibition agents are ready for action.

Just where the scheduled [illegible] drive will start or the number of men to be engaged by the dry forces in "mopping up" the city, a subject the Rev. Jonathan Lewis, prohibition administrator, refused to discuss today.

READY FOR DRIVE

For two weeks the student agents and many of the "veterans" have been instructed in the rudiments of criminal investigation," criminal and constitutional law and other matters by two special instructors sent here from the national prohibition administrator's office in Washington.

The "school" has been held at 261 Franklin st., Boston. There the different classes were put through a course of instruction and are reported to have acquitted themselves nobly. They were instructed in the art of the "shadowing" of "suspects" in autos, trucks and other vehicles used in the shipment of contraband liquors.

SECRECY IN PLANS.

The only information given out at prohibition headquarters relative to the "school" was that the "13 candidates" will receive final instructions tomorrow.

From a source other than prohibition headquarters it was learned that "views" had been taken of suspected "dives" "hard cases," reported stands of bootleggers in front of dance halls, places where autos are parked from which the latter get their supplies, [illegible] orders, garages and drug stores.

Mobilization points of the dry agents for the drive is being kept secret, it was learned.

Corns and Bunions Trumps for Shoeless Motorist

As he's driving on.

The bare facts of John [illegible] Barker's case in Malden court today were that he was driving without shoes and stockings, and without that which came into [illegible] made it quite Patrolman Rowe of Wakefield swerved that Barker, who lives in Hyde st., Malden, was driving without any relation to a straight line and without that purity of breath which should distinguish the motorist.

Barker maintained he was driving without shoes or stockings because his corns hurt and failed to navigate a police-drawn chalk line for the same reason. He was without liquor, he claimed.

Judge Elbridge G. Davis thrilled lovers of the chiropodic by ruling Barker was without guilt.

And so Barker whipped his corns into line and departed.

In court, however, he had his corns wrapped in correct shoes and what, sometimes, they spell as sox.

Light Guarantee Called Excessive

Representative James E. Kendall of Dunstable today requested the Public Utilities Commission to settle the differences between residents of that town and officials of the Middlesex County Electric Co. in respect to an application for an extension of the company lines.

MAN ALWAYS REMEMBERS THE FIRST WOMAN HE LOVED

By HELEN ROWLAND

A MAN was recently asked the Age of Discretion when he decides that his wife and his cook are the only important women in his life.

* * *

A man always remembers the first woman he ever loved—his difficulty is in remembering the one before the last.

* * *

You can always tell when a man has been on a pastime, cold bottle night, by the extreme virtue of his pronouncements against liquor and women next morning.

* * *

The trouble with most of these "young love-matches" is that so many people rush into them without even a dictionary to tell them what love IS.

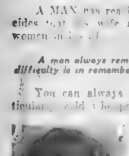
* * *

When the divorce comes out, all his friends say, "Why did she ever [illegible]? I all his friends say. "How did she ever get him?"

* * *

Nature endowed woman with beauty, grace, intuition and tenderness—and then the devil spoiled everything by giving her a tongue.

* * *



HELEN ROWLAND.

Sometimes a girl with a scientific training and a highbrow education gets over it sufficiently to marry almost as well as if she had stayed at home from college and spent her time in the beauty parlors.

* * *

The modern girl is the sort of optimist who believes that the more brazes she gives a man at retail, the more he will want to acquire an option on them at wholesale.

* * *

The Age of Discretion, for a woman, is that at which she stops putting candles on her birthday cake, for fear of a conflagration.

* * *

EXPOSE TAKES ONE MORE JOY OUT OF LIFE

"Charlotte" of 2 Heads Vanishes

CHARLOTTE, the [illegible] with two heads.

"Two heads that talk, two heads that eat, two heads to sleep, two heads that [illegible]."

That's what the barker said about Charlotte down at Coney Island.

And people pushed and shoved and struggled through the first to go into the sideshow and see Charlotte, and watch her eat, and see her breathe—and go home and tell the folks about her.

Old people and young people, country people and city wise crackers—they all wanted to see Charlotte, and Charlotte's manager was making money as fast he thought of buying a new airplane, and taking Charlotte and her two heads around the world on a trip bearing as much misery, joy and gladness to all the people of the earth who loved to see freaks and talk about them.

And then some jealous meanie had to go and say that Charlotte was a fake. Charlotte had only one head, just like every other girl—the second head was just an illusion created by a mirror, and now maybe poor Charlotte will have to go back to serving clam chowder and watermelon at one of the beach hot dog stands and not be a rich freak anymore.

What a shame.

No, I'm not an awfully sorry for Charlotte or her manager, either.

I'm sorry for the people who have had their dreams destroyed.

What a grand thing to go home to Coon Center, and tell the folks all about Charlotte—sit there on the porch after dinner, with the crickets chirping and the moon rising like a big yellow balloon, and the big yellow primroses in the side yard blowing open, and old Rover asleep on the steps and all the neighbors saying Honestly, did you see it yourself?"

"Talked—did she—what did she say?"

"Smiled at you? Well, well, just think of that, Charlotte the girl with Two Heads."

And then have some Smart Aleck from down at the Corners come and read an article in the paper telling all about Charlotte, and how she wasn't a real freak after all, but just an "illusion" or whatever that is.

It does seem as if somebody was always taking the joy out of life—doesn't it?

QUICK, EASY CHOCOLATE DESSERTS

By MARTHA LEE

I KNOW THAT these people read my article on what to do with a package of lemon pie filling, because three wrote in asking to buy my stamped recipes on what to do with a package of ready-prepared chocolate dessert.

Martha Lee

So, here we go.

Firstly, how would you like to make some quick and yummy chocolate nut fudge? It's mighty good and proof against many of the faults fudge is heir to. To make it, place one package of the chocolate dessert powder in a saucepan, with 2 cups of granulated sugar, 1¼ cups of milk and ¼ tbsp. of butter.

Stir until the sugar stops grating against the side of the pan, then bring slowly to a boil and cook until a firm ball forms in cold water when tested. Remove from the fire and add a tiny speck of cream of tartar, about the size of a pea, and beat until thick. Then add ½ cup of chopped nut meats and 1 tsp of vanilla. Pour into buttered pans to harden.

Chocolate Pie is mighty good made with the chocolate filling poured into a previously baked crust and covered with a meringue and browned in a medium oven. Or covered with ice cream, sweetened and flavored whipped cream. Use this chocolate filling too for eclairs and cakes.

Speaking of cakes, reminds me that you can make a mighty good chocolate cake thus:

CHOCOLATE CAKE
1 pkg. chocolate filling
1½ cups flour
2 tsps. baking powder
¼ tsp. salt
¾ cup butter
¾ cup sugar
1 egg
1 cup milk
1 tsp. vanilla

Cream butter and sugar; then add egg yolk and beat until very light. Add part of the dry ingredients which have been mixed and sifted. Add part of the milk; remaining dry ingredients and milk to be added a little at a time until all is added. Next fold in white of egg beaten stiff. Add vanilla and bake in moderate oven (375 deg.) about 30 minutes.

Faithfully yours,

Martha Lee

Beach Mode in a New Design

By PARIS BUREAU

PARIS, July 14—Like the shifting sands of the beach, the beach fashions shift and dissolve into new and different manifestations. Time was when one could carefully put away the old bathing suit and beach robe with the assurance that it would do useful service the year following.

But we have changed all that! Each season we must have a completely restocked beach wardrobe, for not only each season but during the season itself there are invariably new ensembles and accessories.

It is good that one spends the major portion of one's vacation day in these clothes otherwise the whole holiday would be spent in changing one's costume and it would be impossible to travel without a couple of trunks of clothes and accessories. As it is a couple of tennis frocks, a smart collection of beach costumes and a few little dinner frocks will fill their share in seeing you through the sartorial phase of your vacation in grand style.

Simple Tumors Often Cause Undue Alarm

By DR. R. S. COPELAND

"TUMOR" IS the word commonly used in describing a swelling of the tissues. As a matter of fact, it is derived from the Greek word meaning swelling.

Dr. Copeland

[illegible] the word tumor is most frequently used to refer to the swelling of cancer. It is for that reason that [illegible] a person becomes [illegible] alarmed when told by the physician that he has a tumor. [illegible] of the [illegible] types of tumor that I can tell you about is known as a [illegible]. These [illegible] small [illegible] and [illegible] in size from [illegible] to [illegible] as large as two inches or more in diameter.

Sebaceous cysts are most commonly seen in the scalp. They also occur behind the ear, in the eyebrow or wherever hair is found. Though found in young adults, they are most common in middle age.

The condition is caused by a blocking up of the duct of a sebaceous gland, a gland of the skin. The material manufactured by the gland gradually accumulates within its envelope and produces the tumor.

The tumor grows rather rapidly, but sometimes has long dormant periods when it does not seem to grow at all. One of these cysts, or tumors, may attain a very large size if left alone.

It may become inflamed and rupture, discharging the contents of the sac. This gives but temporary relief, because the sac will fill again in a short time.

There is only one thing to do for this condition. The cyst and its contents must be removed. In addition to removing the sac, this procedure guards against its recurrence.

The operation is very simple and can be done in the doctor's office. There is no pain attached to it, as it is usually performed under local anaesthesia.

I advise having such tumors removed. A clever done little operation amounts to nothing. If the swelling is left alone and is ever permitted to rupture, in addition to becoming inflamed, it may cause great misery and discomfort.

Answers to Health Queries

PERE. Q—What can be done for hot, perspiring feet; also blisters on the toes? My shoes feel comfortable, although I am on my feet a good part of the day?

A—What would you advise for a child whose appetite has become jaded? He is eight years old and seems well and normal in all other respects.

A—These are more or less common symptoms at this time of the year. Changing the shoes and socks as frequently as possible will bring about increased comforts. Foot baths should prove soothing under the circumstances.

2—The trouble may be due to intestinal worms or it is possible that the child is not getting enough variety in his diet. For further particulars send a self-addressed envelope and repeat your question.

Miss Fairfax Advises Her to Speak

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

It all began in my ignorance of not knowing that a girl first addresses the boy upon meeting on the street. I lived and worked on a farm until I came to high school. There I met him and now my school days are almost over, and I am afraid I shall never see him again. In our first class together, we knew we liked each other but neither being forward, we avoided each other in class work after school and so have never had time for school activities. One day, after he had been introduced to me, I met him on the street and did not speak to him. Now I do not know what to do. He thinks I am "stuck-up." It is all my fault, and when I am old perhaps I will say: "It might have been IF I had only said hello." Again I think, if he had really wanted me, he would not have stopped because—"Faint heart never won fair lady." Have you any suggestions to make? Shall I speak to him the next time we meet?

ALMOST HOPELESS.

Dear Hopeless—Yes, I should speak to him the first time you meet. Why not? Since you have met in the first place through a proper introduction, there could be no impropriety in your even writing this young man a note, saying that you are troubled in not having recognized him until after you had passed.

STUFFED-EGG SALAD

6 hard cooked eggs; ¼ cupful minced ham; Mayonnaise; Lettuce.

Remove the yolks from the hard cooked eggs and combine with the minced ham and sufficient mayonnaise to moisten. Fill the eggs with this mixture and place one stuffed egg in each nest of lettuce. Sardines, parsley, chives, anchovy or minced bacon may be used instead of the ham.

CHERRY ROLL

First pit 1 qt. of cherries, cover with 1 cup sugar. Add 2 tbsps. water to make more juice. Let cherries stand so as to get rich sweet juice.

Dough—Two and one-half cups flour, 4 tsps. baking powder, 1 tsp. salt, 2 tbsps. shortening, ¾ cup sugar, ¾ to ⅞ cup milk, 1 egg. Sift flour, baking powder, salt and sugar. Cut in shortening with a knife. Add well-beaten egg to half of milk. Then add to fruit mixture. Add rest of milk to make soft dough. Roll out very gently on a lightly floured board to ½ inch thickness. Then brush the whole surface with melted shortening. Then spread with 2 cups of sugared cherries. Be sure they are well drained, but save the juice. Then roll up the dough handling very lightly. Place in center of a shallow pan, well greased with shortening. Put in hot oven, 450 deg. F. As soon as it begins to brown reduce heat to 350 to finish baking. It takes 45 minutes altogether. When it is done pour over the top the rest of the cherries and all of the juice and serve.—Mrs. Ann Campbell, 818 East Fourth st., South Boston.

Have Lustrous Hair Despite Summer Sun

By MISS HUDDLESTON.

AT THIS particular season, when scalp and hair suffer from over-exposure to the sun, and so have a parched appearance, it is well to begin corrective treatments now, so that the early fall season will find us with a head of lustrous hair that suffers no ill effects from the loving rays of Old Sol.

Josephine Huddleston

Brushing the hair and massaging the scalp will, in some cases where only a slight dry condition exists, prove sufficient to stimulate circulation and so normalize the flow of natural oil from the oil ducts, but if the dry condition is beyond such simple treatment, I've worked out an easy, but most effective weekly routine that will make the hair soft and lovely in just a few treatments.

Brushing and combing the hair should begin every scalp treatment or shampoo, so we'll begin this routine by a vigorous brushing and combing.

If the hair and scalp are extremely dry and the hair suffers split ends and an unusually dry appearance, three-fourths glass castor oil and one-fourth glass olive oil should be used. These oils should be blended together before heating. In cases where an extremely dry condition has become chronic, pure castor oil will prove most beneficial.

Let the oils remain on for one hour, following with a thorough shampoo. Remove every trace of oil from the hair, and, most important of all in correcting a dry condition, the hair should be rinsed until not a trace of soap remains, using first hot and gradually cold water. Repeat the oil applications and thorough shampoo each week until all dryness is corrected and the hair appears silky and lustrous.

FOR TITLE---FOR BUDDIES

For it's Tommy this, an' Tommy that, an' "Chuck him out, the brute!"
But it's "Saviour of 'is country" when the guns begin to shoot;
Then it's Tommy this, an' Tommy that, an' "Tommy, ow's yer soul?"
But it's "Thin red line of 'eroes" when the drums begin to roll.
Rudyard Kipling

You're right, Britannia's warrior bard, it's the same upon this side,
The boys who paid the price in full, who fought and bled and died,—
The ones we cheered so loudly for, when the band went marching by,
The ones we called "Our heroes brave," when they went forth to die—
Now lay forgotten in their graves, or toss on beds of pain
Ignored by us, who have no thoughts, save for pleasure, self and gain

The other day in Waltham town, we saw there, selling flowers,
To help disabled buddies out, a soldier, stand for hours
Unheeded, disdained by everyone, and the tears crept in our eye
As we watched that jesting, thoughtless throng, all pass that soldier by Oh! How can we so soon forget? How can we banish care
And thought of those who bore the Flag through the Hell of Over There!

Thank God, the Vets together stand, and unite to help their own
And lasting prove the comradeship, that Over There was sown
Tonight the Crosscup-Pishon Post will sound the Assembly call
For all of us to fall in line for those brothers of us all
Who gave their all, and willingly, in the Hell of Over There
That nothing ill should happen to those they loved so Over Here

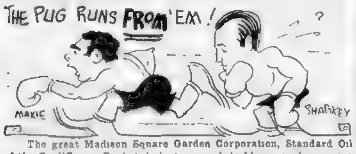
Three Loud Cheers for Grunt and Groaners

Wrestling rides the crest of wave while boxing's in the dumps,
Grappling gates are swollen so, you'd think they had the mumps,
Why that's so is just as plain as node on Maloney's face,
Leaving ring after Ernie Schaaf had given the coup de grace.
"What's the reason?" we hear you ask, "Pray tell us all, how come?"
Wrestling Champ runs AT his man, Boxing Champ runs FROM!

With a right break in the weather more than 50,000 persons may storm Braves Field, tonight, to see Henri DeGlane defend his world's wrestling throne against Ed George under the auspices of the Crosscup-Pishon Post. If the Weather Man only is good on July 30 an even greater crowd will swamp the Wigwam to see tonight's winner clash with Dynamite Gus Sonnenberg in aid of the Boston Evening American's Xmas Basket and Allied Funds. Fans have been swarming to the wrestling shows like flies to a sugar barrel. Boxing continues to "feel the depression." The Schmeling-Stribling gate was far from being what a world's heavyweight championship gate should be. The recent Schaaf-Maloney show in the Boston Garden was the first sell out the gentry of the Scrambled Ear have scored in many moons. Why is it the fans only are lukewarm to boxing while the Grunt and Groan Game is drawing like a porous plaster?

The answer is the wrestling champions are defending their crowns. The boxing champions are not. Save Jack Sharkey none of the top flight ring heavies want to crawl through the ropes against anything except a personally selected opponent. Other heavies avoid Sharkey like the smallpox. The big thing that soured the sports public on boxing was Max Schmeling, who in the face of written and oral promises to defend his title against Sharkey deliberately ran out on the Boston Gob and picked the man he was sure of licking, Young Stribling. And now Schmeling has the audacity and the great Madison Square Garden Corporation backs him up, to still duck another match with Sharkey and to pick Primo Carnera, who was beaten once and held to a draw a second time by Jim Maloney, twice knocked out by Ernie Schaaf!



The great Madison Square Garden Corporation, Standard Oil of the Cauliflower Racket, is just as much to blame, perhaps more to blame, than Schmeling. Without the Six Hundred Millionaires the Schmeling-Carnera match would not be possible.

Don't blame it all on the Dutchman from over the Rhine. Our own Gene Tunney, "The Fighting Marine," set Der Maxie a noble example. Tunney ran out on Jack Sharkey, Johnny Risko, who was going good at the time, and other leading heavies, and picked out poor old Tom Heeney on which to make his grand farewell to fistiana. Tunney forced the Heeney match down Tex Rickard's throat.

Don't blame it on the Dutchman, he learned it all from Gene.
Recall the Heeney match, and you'll see what we mean.
And Standard Oil of Boxing is just as much to blame
For letting Stalling Champions dominate The Game.

Boxing hasn't had a real defending champion since Jack Dempsey. Dempsey, like Sharkey, was willing to meet them all. Manassa Jack at all times was ready to meet Harry Wills. He was held off by his manager, Perfumery Jack Kearns. Avoidance of Wills is the one black mark on Dempsey's record. That is one thing Dempsey has to answer for Jack Kearns.

How different the wrestlers. During Gus Sonnenberg's reign Dynamite Gus defended his world's heavyweight throne against all comers. He lost the title to Ed George. George quickly was dethroned by Strangler Lewis. The Strangler in turn bit himself out of and bit DeGlane in to, the championship. Now tonight you will see DeGlane take on one of the most dangerous of all his opponents, Ed George. Before making tonight's match both De Glane and George agreed, if winner, to defend the title against Sonnenberg in the great Boston Evening American show of July 30.

The great throng that will storm the Wigwam, tonight, will prove the fans still love sport. You can't consider a game in which a champion makes his title a sinecure, as in present day boxing, and refuses to meet any opponent who has a chance in the world of toppling him off his throne, a sport. The heavyweight boxing champions have made the sport of boxing a business. A business pure and simple, a business in which not one iota of sport is concerned. Turn the business of boxing back to the sport of boxing and you'll get million dollar gates again, Mister Promoter.

In the meantime wrestling rides the crest of the wave. As long as the champions keep on in willing defense of their titles, like Henri DeGlane is doing at the great Crosscup-Pishon wrestling show at Braves Field, tonight, and the winner will do against Gus Sonnenberg at the even greater wrestling show of the Boston Evening American on July 30, wrestling will stay on the crest of the wave.

You have to hand it to promoters like Paul Bowser and Alex MacLean, who have enough gray matter under their skulls to know that the business of boxing or wrestling depends on the public more than the contestants. Give the public what the public wants, Mister Promoter, not what the pug or the grunter wants. He makes his living off the public, not the public off him.

Now wily old Tex Rickard said no fighting man
Could make a real promoter forget plain Mister Fan.
Promoters should remember, while boxers draw the gate,
That after all the public is Johnny Pay The Freight!

George Seeks to Lift Title in Legion Show

By JACK CONWAY

Henri DeGlane, world's heavyweight wrestling champion, rules a 10 to 9 favorite for his finish bout with Ed Don George which will top the Crosscup-Pishon Post's mat carnival at Braves Field tonight.

The titleholder and challenger arrived in Boston this morning from their respective training camps. DeGlane trained at Pine Grove Inn just outside of Marlboro, while George conditioned himself at Mansion Inn.

Jack Conway

It is seldom that two wrestlers have been in as splendid physical condition as De Glane and George. They eliminated barnstorming bouts and devoted all of their attention to getting ready for their championship skirmish.

This writer saw DeGlane and George breeze through their training contests. They are now ready to step in and give the fans one of the most [illegible] contests of the season.

DeGlane looked the part of a champion at his training camp. He is a bronzed Adonis [illegible] working in the open air.

DeGlane Has Defense for Flying Tackle

The Frenchman is a finished wrestler. He is a master of every hold, and has built up what he considers a perfect defense against the flying tackle.

The champion hits his opponent with his left hand on the back of the neck. This drives him to the floor. Henri rips in his right to the head. This usually finishes all attempts to score with the tackle.

I noticed DeGlane uses his left elbow very effectively when at close quarters. This is not exactly good etiquette, but then wrestling has developed into a rough he-man game.

George has been devoting his time to building up speed. He has been wrecking his opponents since he lost his title to Strangler Lewis on the Coast. Howard Cantonwine and George McLeod discovered to their sorrow that the former Michigan star has a terrible attack. It is likely that George will employ similar tactics against DeGlane.

It will be the third meeting between George and DeGlane. The first contest was in Los Angeles last winter and resulted in victory for George. The big fellows collided recently at Buffalo and each had scored a fall when hostilities ended at 11 o'clock.

Tonight's contest will be to a positive finish and so the [illegible] will be decisive.

Sonnenberg and Muir in the Semifinal

The semifinal bout will find Gus Sonnenberg, former world's champion and the greatest card in the wrestling game, battling Bonnie Muir of Australia.

The Dynamiter was peeved because he was not given the shot at DeGlane, but he finally consented to tackle the rugged Muir. The latter has shown to advantage in each of his Boston starts and [illegible] opinion he will upset Gus.

Lewis and George are the only wrestlers who have ever beaten Sonnenberg. Which makes it look as if Muir has quite an assignment.

DeGlane Conway's Choice to Win Over George

Jack Conway today [illegible] Henri DeGlane [illegible] heavyweight wrestling champion, to successfully defend his title against Ed George in their finish bout at Braves Field tonight.

"I hopped aboard the DeGlane band wagon after seeing him in his final workout at Marlboro," said Jack. "George should give the champion a furious [illegible] Ed can upset the dope he going after DeGlane like [illegible] did when he licked Cantonwine and McLeod.

"Gus Sonnenberg, whom I consider the greatest wrestler in the world, should upset Bonnie Muir."

Conway added one more victory to his list when George Nichols won from [illegible] in their boxing bout at [illegible] Field. Jack's [illegible] record follows:

DOYLE LEADS IN MASS. AMATEUR WITH 75

THREE IN TIE FOR SECOND PLACE

By BILL GRIMES

Playing the course for his first time, Francis "Anzy" Doyle, Wachusett, shot a 75 to lead the field in the qualifying round of the 27th Massachusetts Amateur championship this afternoon at the Winchester Country Club.

Until the Worcester boy came in with his 75, Wilfred Crossley, Norfolk, Fred J. Wright, Jr., Albemarle and Charles E. Crane, Commonwealth, were deadlocked at 77, the best rounds of the day.

Doyle started with a birdie on the second hole, where he ran down an 8-foot putt for a 4, but a trap second shot at the fourth put him back at par, which he held through the sixth.

At the seventh his second shot landed in another trap causing him a stroke, which he made up getting a birdie at the long eighth. He wound up his afternoon's work with a three for a 36, which was the only perfect first nine of the day.

On his inward trip, Doyle slipped over par at the 10th and 13th holes, saving himself at least one stroke at the latter by running down a putt after wasting three shots in traps on his way to the green.

Doyle swung back into par figures starting at the 14th and was perfect until he reached the 18th green where, after being trapped with his second, he came out with an 8 feet of the cup. He missed the put taking a 5 for a 39 for the inward nine and a 75 for the day.

Doyle's card

Out ..... 4 4 4 5 4 3 5 4 3—36
In ..... 5 5 4 3 4 4 4 5 5—39—75

Bill Blaney, the former New England amateur champion, put together a pair of 40's for an even 80 and Al Wade, Norfolk, was in fourth place with an 81, one stroke better than Bill Woodsum of Albemarle.

Horace Partridge, Crow Point; Chuck Greene, Mt. Pleasant; Wm Cobb, Charles River, and Bill Hevia, Woolaston, were deadlocked with 83.

Billy McPhail, regarded as one of the strong contenders came up with an 11 on the first hole, running high the strike from N. Folk still has a good chance to qualify.

Wilfred Crossley was out in 38 and came back in 39 for his 77. He had two putting greens, the 5 and 15, and missed short putts at the 3d, 10th and 17th. Crossley started with his par hole, but a trap clipping dead at the 3d green for his par, he missed a short putt and came up with a 5.

However, he swung back to par figures at the 4th and 5th, but he failed to catch fire again from his 6th tee, which cost him a 6. He followed this with a birdie 3 at the 8th by running down a 10-foot putt.

Crossley took 3 putts for a 6 at the 9th, but recovered on the next hole for a 3 to be out in 38.

Took 5 at 10th Hole When He Missed 3-Foot Putt

Another missed putt from less than 3 feet cost Crossley a 5 at the 10th, but then he clicked off four consecutive pars only to hook his tee shot off at the 15th and then land his second in the trap.

Crossley came out well but took three putts for a 5. A bunker at the 16th made up a stroke for the junior champion but he lost it immediately when he caught the trap going to the 17th. A fine 4 at the home hole gave Crossley a 39 for the inward round and a 77 for his first day's work.

Crossley's card

Out ..... 5 5 4 4 4 5 6 3 3—38
In ..... 5 3 5 5 3 6 3 5 4—39—77

Doten Started Off Poorly With a 7

Although Chan Doten opened up with a 7 at the first hole the Wellesley player refused to quit and was rewarded with a 79 despite the 7 at the first and a 6 at the 8th hole. Doten was 38 at the turn and he came back in 41 with a 5—5—5 finish.

After a fine drive from the first tee Doten found his ball in a divot from where he played a magnificent out. His ball hit on the top of the bank in front of the green, but instead of bouncing it kicked back and rolled to the bottom. He missed the green entirely with his third shot and after getting on in 4 went through the usual procedure of three putts for a 7.

Apparently he forgot the disastrous first hole, for he was home on the par 5 second with a drive and a brassie, then ran down a 20-foot putt for an eagle 3.

He clicked off regulation pars for the next 5 holes, but a trap shot, after a hook drive, gave him a 6 at the 8th and then he got his par at the short 9, being out in 36.

Doten's second shot at the 10th faded into a trap and he took a 5 and was one over par at the next hole, where he was short from the tee and then missed his putt after chipping on.

Going to the 13th hole after parring the 12th, Doten's second shot ran into the rough from where he was unable to get home with a three, winding up with a six.

He got a three at the short 14th and a birdie at the 15th where he played a spoon for his second shot, to feet from the cup and canned the ball.

With three pars for a 76, Doten developed a hook and finished one over perfect figures at each of the remaining holes.

How Kearns Figures to Win

By MYLES T. McSWEENEY

Jack Sharkey, who meets Mickey Walker in the Milk Fund show at Ebbets Field next week, complains that Jack Kearns, Walker's manager, has made it impossible for him to get suitable sparring partners.

Sharkey, used to fighting the big fellows, may find difficulty in finding Walker's range. At least that's what Kearns hopes.

Kearns expects Sharkey's drives will overshoot their target if Jack is unable to practice punching on spar mates of Walker's build.

If Sharkey isn't careful, Kearns figures the Boston sailor will knock out the first six rows of customers.

And flatten the referee. And knock the judges goofy.

By the time Sharkey has knocked out everyone but Walker, the fight will be over.

And Walker can claim the victory by default.

BROWNS WON 18 OUT OF LAST 28

By JOE CASHMAN

The St. Louis Browns, who open a five-game series with the Red Sox at the Fens this afternoon, have won 18 out of their last 28 starts and climbed from the cellar to fifth place, all because of a taunt.

A month ago, deep in the basement and apparently content to remain there as long as they drew their pay checks every two weeks, the Mound City athletes entered Philadelphia for an engagement with the world's champion Athletics.

They dropped each of the first three games by a wide margin and went into the late innings of the final contest against George Earnshaw trailing by 10 or 12 runs.

Now Connie Mack's right-handed ace and iron man is a pleasant, easy-going type of athlete who rarely looks for trouble either on or off the diamond, but on this occasion he was mowing down the Browns so easily that he began to ridicule them.

He scornfully told them that they couldn't make a hit if any one of the A's infielders or outfielders were pitching and attempted to prove it by offering each of his supporting cast a chance to take the mound.

Of course, Connie Mack wouldn't stand for that and made Earnshaw remain on the hill, but he did show that he agreed with his big pitcher's low opinion of the opposition by pulling out most of his regulars and finishing the game with a lineup which had Eddie Rommel, a pitcher, playing second base.

The game over the A's promptly forgot all about the incident, but not so the Browns.

They didn't mind losing, they had grown used to it, but the "riding" they had received from the Mackmen burned them up.

They returned to their own back yard following the series with the A's and for the next three weeks made every rival that happened into the Mound City curse the folly of the A's.

The Yankees were the first victims. Babe Ruth & Co. invaded the Missouri metropolis expecting to clean up but they were very fortunate to escape with two victories in five starts.

Then came the Mackmen. They smiled at the threats which greeted them upon their arrival and laughed out loud when "Lefty" Grove blanked the Killefer crew with two hits in the first game.

Well, that's telling 'em.

Walker Chock Full of Confidence

If a gladiator's mental attitude toward an impending battle has anything to do with the result, and I am inclined to think it does, Walker ought to figure a sure winner over Sharkey when they tangle at Ebbets Field on the night of July 22 for the benefit of the Milk Fund of which Mrs. William Randolph Hearst is chairman.

I dug up Hypus Lope, the sports journalist one of the best known authorities on pugilistic matters in the country. Hypus goes back to Jimmy da Jeff and Jeff Artha, and all those boys. Hypus has been living in Walker's camp for some time, and Walker has picked Hypus as his pal.

Hypus is a fellow who never permits himself to be drawn into error by the most intimate companionship with a gladiator—that is, error on the gladiator's condition, state of mind, ability and chances in an impending tilt.

So I dug up Hypus, as I have said, and I spoke to Hypus about Walker.

"Listen, Hypus," I said, "you're with this blighter all the time—what does he really think about this fight? What is your estimate of the old M. A.?"

"You mean the mental attitude?" asked Hypus. "Well, now I'll tell you.

Mickey Can't See How He Can Lose

"Damon," Hypus said earnestly, "this guy honestly thinks the Sharkey fight is in. He doesn't see how he can miss. His chief concern is the match with Max Schmeling next year for the undisputed title. He talks about that much more than he does about the fight with Sharkey."

NICHOLS WINS VERDICT OVER LARIVEE

By RINGSIDE

George Nichols of Buffalo added one more to his list of Boston victories when he outpunched Leo Larivee of Waterbury, Ct., in a rugged 10-round bout at an Argonne A. A. show at Braves Field.

In the first round Nichols shook Larivee up with a left to the body, but Leo came back and scored a hard right to the chin.

Nichols started the claret flowing from Larivee's nose in the second chapter.

Nichols punched Larivee through the ropes in the third session, Leo was in poor shape at the bell.

Nichols continued his heavy bombardment in the fourth. Larivee stepped on Nichols' foot and sent him to the canvas.

The fifth round also saw Nichols out in front.

Larivee rallied in the sixth heat, and had the edge by his cleaner hitting.

Nichols Punches Way to Lead

Nichols came on again in the seventh, and punched his way into the lead.

Nichols rushed from his corner at the opening of the eighth. He hailed Larivee on the chin with lefts and rights. He then hauled off and belted Leo on the jaw with a terrific left. Larivee went down and took the count of nine. He was dazed when he got up, but his courage carried him through the round.

Nichols hit Larivee low in the ninth, but the courageous Waterbury boy laughed off the punch.

Nichols also had the best of the 10th. Larivee slipped to the canvas in this round.

Brown Beats Bush in Furious Fight

Hale Brown of Louisiana defeated Willie Bush of Waterbury after eight furious rounds of milling. It was one of the best prelim bouts seen here this year.

In the sixth round, Bush was down three times. Brown rained blows on him, but Bush lasted out the frame.

Bush waged a come back in the seventh frame. The boys were arm weary in the eighth session.

Joey La Toma of Buffalo won the decision over Jack McCarron of Somerville in four rounds.

Speck Friend of Ponca City disposed of Johnny Barrett of Cambridge in four heats.

Jerry La Montagne of Rochester, N. H., upset Arthur Nadeau of Cambridge in four sessions.

Double Wind-Up Next Monday

For next Monday night the Argonne Club has a double windup. Werter Arcelli will take on Leslie Baker, while Darcy White will oppose Jack Renault.

GOOD GOLF

By CHESTER HORTON
"Golf's Greatest Teacher"

Now and then we see the baseball gripper in golf—and once in a while a golfer plays a good game indeed. The habit of gripping the shaft deep into the palms of the hands not only is almost certain to lead to too much rigidity in the grip, stiffening the wrists, but it also puts the right hand in the position of having the palm facing more upward than it should. Now if your right palm faces upward this way, and your wrists are stiff—as they are almost certain to be—the ball will be you will simply scoop the ball instead of swinging the clubhead smoothly through it. The scooped shot invariably sends the ball high every inclination here being toward up rather than forward. This happens mostly because the wrists paralyzed with rigidity, can do nothing but start upward when the limit of reaching capacity with the arms is attained, about the time the clubhead gets to the ball.

WOLGAST KEEPS RING CROWN

New York, July 14 (US)—Midget Wolgast, of Philadelphia, easily retained his title of flyweight champion against Ruby Bradley, Negro of Holyoke, Mass., after 15 rounds of fast fighting at the Coney Island Stadium last night.

The champion virtually cut Bradley to ribbons in the latter part of the fight, plastering the challenger with rights and lefts to the body and head.

Bradley's nose was spurting claret and his lips were puffed at the end of the bout. Wolgast, however did not come out of the battle unmarred. Ruby cut him under the left eye in the eighth with a hard right that momentarily stunned the champ

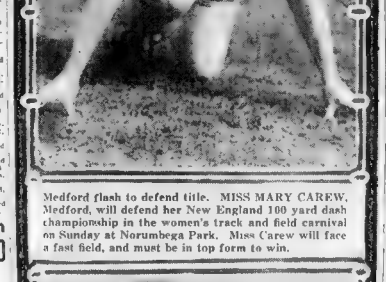
DAILY SHOTS FROM EVERYWHERE

Medford flash to defend title. MISS MARY CAREW, Medford, will defend her New England 100 yard dash championship in the women's track and field carnival on Sunday at Norumbega Park. Miss Carew will face a fast field, and must be in top form to win.



One good reason why Mackmen lead. BOB "LEFTY" GROVE, Athletics' box ace, chalked up his eighteenth victory of the season yesterday, defeating the Senators in the first game of a double header. With mound aces like Grove the A's are not easily beaten.

Diamond Dust

By JOE CASHMAN

The Braves open a four-game series with the lowly Reds in Cincinnati this afternoon. Old Tom Zachary is due to pitch for the Tribe while "Red" Lucas will probably be the mound choice of the Howlermen.

The Reds are in the cellar, but they would be in the first division if they could beat all rivals as often as they have licked the Warriors to date this season. The last time they were here they took three out of four from the natives and did the same on the McKechniemen's last visit to Cincinnati.

Though found for 13 hits, "Lefty" Grove hung up his 18th victory of the season when the champion Athletics beat the second-place Senators in the first game of their Monday double-header by a score of 15 to 7. A homer with the bases loaded in the eighth by Dib Williams, rookie infielder, who hit for Grove, gave the Mackmen the verdict and enabled them to increase their lead in the race to seven games.

Manager Jewel Ens of the Pirates benched Paul and Lloyd Waner two of the best hitters in the circuit previous to this season in a vain effort to strengthen his attack

The Cardinals picked up one-half game in the National League race by defeating the Cubs, while the second-place Giants were idle, and the champions now have a lead of 4½ games.

Godfrey Wins, Loses in Same Evening

Toronto, Ont., July 14 (AP)—George Godfrey, the one-time "Black Menace of Leiperville, Pa." apparently has confirmed the rather general supposition that he is a better boxer than a wrestler

Big George quit the boxing game for wrestling some months ago, but last night he amused a crowd of 7000 by doing a little of both

The giant Negro, scaling 268 pounds, was thrown in 11 minutes 43 seconds by Stanley Stasick, Poland, 207, in a wrestling match, but a few minutes later knocked out George Gemas of Philadelphia in the second round.

Then the Solons came back to regain that game by capturing the second tilt, 6 to 4. Alvin Crowder outpitching Rube Walberg, veteran Mackian southpaw.

Al Simmons, Jimmy Foxx, Max Bishop and Mickey Cochrane of the A's also hit homers in the first game, while Sheriff Harris and Joe Kuhel came through with circuit clouts to provide the Senators' margin of victory in the nightcap.

Jumba Jim Elliott, who was knocked out of the box by the Giants last Saturday, came back two days later to pitch the Phillies to a 1 to 0 win over the Pirates. He allowed only five hits in chalking up the triumph, his 12th of the campaign.

SHARKEY LAX TRAINING FOR WALKER

Pompton Lakes, N. J., July 11—Boxing experts who have viewed Jack Sharkey train here at Dr. Bier's health farm for his 15-round battle with Mickey Walker, on July 22, at Ebbets Field, in Brooklyn, have arrived at the conclusion that the big Bostonian is evidently preparing for a 10-yard race between fat men rather than a sizzling encounter with a determined, hard-hitting foe.

Sharkey is patently confident that he will knock Mickey stiffer than grandpa's celluloid neck decoration.

Jack reached the peak of form three weeks ago after working diligently for the match with Primo Carnera, which never materialized and has since let down in his training.

He avows he will not drive himself physically again until he begins work for his match with Tommy Loughran booked for August 10 at Ebbets Field in the event that he whips Walker.

Sharkey 20 Per Cent Slower on Feet

At an age when weight accumulates rapidly, Jack has assumed porcine proportions during the stay here. Rolls of fat are about his waist, his face is puffed and his thighs have thickened to such an extent that they resemble animated beer kegs

Sharkey is at least 20 per cent slower afoot than when he fought Schmeling

The shortage of sparring partners which hampered Sharkey's training until last Sunday was relieved when two punch receivers arrived here yesterday, and Jack took on three of the boys for a round each

He boxed with Jack Poliseo Newark light heavyweight; Joe Banovic, Binghamton light heavy and Eaul Cawley, Paterson heavyweight, an old standby of the Lith a

Jack Kearns Gives Walker Day Off

Orangeburg, N. Y., July 14—Before his departure for New York yesterday, Jack Kearns laid out Mickey Walker's program for the day

"No boxing today, Mick," he instructed; "just take things easy, walk a little, snooze a little, eat a little—well, as little as you can with that appetite—and no golf, mind you.

"Unless we better give up golf until after the fight. Too much sun in golf for you now, and besides the way you are going you're liable to hit yourself on the chin with one of those ubiick shots."

Walker, after grinding away for three weeks, welcomed the break in training. Mickey and his retinue arrived here on June 29 and he has been plugging away steadily

He has boxed more than 200 rounds, and in the last week his weight has varied three pounds. He holds up right around 170 pounds, but probably will drop down to 167 for Sharkey. Mick still has a little weight to work off and is trying to hold to it

Italian Rider to Race at Revere

Joe Maltese, a young Italian rider, will make his debut at the Revere Cycle Track Saturday in the one hour motor paced race that will feature Nat Butler's all star card

Maltese has followed the engines in Philadelphia and New York. This week-end he will face Freddy Spencer, former sprint champion, who has fully recovered from a recent injury. Al Letourneur, Frans Duelberg, and Charley Jaeger, last week's winner

Broadcasting Continues Extension of Time to All Hours

A suitable theme song for radio itself—the broadcasting art, if it may be so called, might well be "From Sunrise to Sunset." Fewer and less become the hours for sleep, not only for station workers, but for the listener.

Things begin to happen around 6:30 a. m. on the air and carry on until beyond the 2 a. m. spot, making radio almost a 24-hour proposition. Very shortly it will be. Such seems nonsensical to many, yet there are countless thousands whose lot in life makes it necessary for them to remain awake and moving through the wee hours. Firemen, policemen, telephone men, doctors (hospital attendants), nurses and ill people sleep little. These are the car cuppers who enjoy radio efforts running beyond the hour when good, little grown-up boys and girls (Aren't we all?) shut off speakers and turn in.

NBC Scores Heavily . . . .

One of the most important developments in radio circles of the past year has come to pass during the current week. Mellc Aylesworth, monarch of all he surveys at the National Broadcasting Company, closed up with the management of the new Waldorf Astoria Hotel Corporation in New York to handle all radio activities and broadcasts from the new hostelry. NBC has this concession exclusively. Should it develop that the new Waldorf is to become as famous as its glorious predecessor, royalty and wealth no end from all corners of the world will adorn the guest list constantly.

Tennis is getting a lot of attention from the broadcasters these last few days. Thousands of listeners and letters attended the world's championship court tussles between Tilden, Richards, Kozelnh and others at Forest Hills, Long Island. Enthusiasm apparently runs high with listeners, making it a major radio sport, sf you get what is meant.

This department has published radio favorites of radio favorites, getting the low-down direct. Secretly, something unusual has been looked for every day and at last it happened. Word comes from Rudy Vallee today that his favorite is Ben Alley. Then the flash that Ben Alley considers Rudy the favorite on the air. If they cooked that up between them (which they probably did) it's not quite right, but quite clever. The idea, trying to fool the public in any such manner!

Slips That Pass in the Mike!

Radio mistakes will happen. If other ear cuppers are as keen as Mrs. L. S. Zanche of Pittsfield, Mass., they heard this one during a news flash: "Douglas Fairbanks, husband of Mary Pickford and nine others, has entered the English golf tournament."

F. Chase Taylor, popularly known as Colonel Stoopnagle, explains the Gloom Chasers' (WNAC) success this way: "The program seems to be popular in spite of everything we do."

"DUMB DORA'S" LESSON

Students in the Boston American Art Course have as teacher today Paul Fung, creator of "Dumb Dora." He teaches you the trick of dressing up your characters.

HOW TO DRESS COMIC FIGURES

You've probably had trouble making clothes hang properly on your characters. If you haven't, you're lucky, because sketching clothes so that they look like clothes and not like plaster or wallpaper, is one of the hardest things for the beginner in drawing to do.

Today Paul Fung, who draws Dumb Dora—and you know how well she dresses—tells you how to do the trick.

By PAUL FUNG

Here is one lesson that applies to comic art, portrait-painting, illustration—in fact, to any kind of picture making in which the human figure is shown with clothes on. At least, in its broad principles it does.

I'm going to try to tell you today how to make clothes look as if they had people inside them instead of clothes racks, and it's a hard job to explain it. However, it's fairly easy to do it if you keep certain principles in mind. If you don't you will discover to your sorrow how easy it is to make your characters look like plaster slabs with clothes painted on them.

CLOTHES MAKE THE ART

Clothes help a lot in showing your characteristics and action of your characters. For instance, a sloppy man wears sloppy clothes; an attractive girl dresses in an attractive manner, and so on. And when a man bends his arm he wrinkles his coat sleeve, and so on.

The important thing to remember when you draw clothes is that there's somebody in those clothes. Clothes have to follow the contours and outlines of the body, otherwise they're bound to look wrong. That's true even of hats.

Try drawing a face and then put a hat on it. Does that hat look as if it belonged there? Not unless you're good enough to imagine the outlines of the head while you're drawing the hat. Now draw the whole head and put a hat on it.

See the difference? Even after you've erased the outlines of the head where the hat covers them, the picture still looks as if the head was there, inside the hat.

That's what I did with Dora in the first picture. I drew Dora's head, new haircut and all, then I looked through the women's hats carefully to make it fit too. Once when I put a hat on her that did not fit, she—but then, my trials with Dora the dumbell, aren't part of the lesson.

TO DO FULL FIGURE

I did the same thing with Rod and Strong although Rod's hat is sort of odd and curly around the edges, as you might expect from such a careless sort of person.

Now, about the full figure. Sketch in the outlines of the body not carefully or completely, but enough so that you can follow them when you draw the clothes and shade them. See how Strong's clothes follow the lines of his arms and shoulders? You have to be particularly careful about this in drawing solid black clothes such as Rod has on in the next picture.

Wrinkles you'll have to be careful about. Every time a person moves his clothes wrinkle, and the only way you can learn to draw wrinkles right is to watch other people and see how their clothes wrinkle.

Wrinkles are tremendously important, because every time you draw a character in a certain position you have to make the wrinkles fit the position, otherwise the whole figure will look wrong. So I advise you to notice this thing in watching people, and draw from life when you can.

A COMMON FAULT

The last drawing I've made for you today is to warn you against a common fault of beginners. The tendency in drawing a man's coat is to make the collar turn back over the shoulders, as I have done with the dotted lines in the first figure at the bottom of the plate.

That's wrong, because it violates the principle of making the clothes fit the body. The collar follows the line of the neck, which, of course, is round. I've drawn it correctly for you in the second sketch, so that you can see what I mean. Notice how flat the chest and shoulders look when the collar is drawn wrong, and how much better they look when it is right. That illustrates the importance of drawing clothes correctly.

Tomorrow Paul Fung will explain to you about his specialty, which—you guessed it—is drawing pretty girls. Watch for this lesson.

"THE CHAMPION"

We arrived at Pine Grove Inn Marlboro Sunday just in time to see Henri DeGlane, "the champ," going through his final workout for his bout with Ed Don George.

The space around the outdoor ring, where DeGlane was going through his paces, was packed tight by the curious who had come to give the champion the once over. Of course, the girls in our party insisted that they must see Henri, so they dashed over and stood on tiptoes watching the pachyderms lumber about the ring.

Later, after the workout was over and we had repaired to the inn for dinner, DeGlane joined us. He is an awe-inspiring physical specimen, but there is nothing of the brute in him when he is out of the ring. He is a gracious son of France, frank and unaffected, and more than a bit shy when there are girls around. He blushes on the slightest provocation as witness when Nick Grant, genial host at Pine Grove, started to tell us about Henri's thrilling rescue of a boy that very morning from drowning.

He blushed again when the girls at the table, unable to control their curiosity any longer, chorused, "Please let us feel your muscle!" He spoke modestly of some of his experiences in the ring—his bouts with Zarynoff, with Stasiak and with Sonnenberg. He spoke, too, with delightfully humorous touches, of his difficulties with English when he first came to this country.

Just as we were finishing our dinner a well-dressed, handsome looking couple entered the dining room. Henri's face lit up with a smile, his eyes twinkled and he raised his hands in greeting.

"My varee best frands," he explained. "He is a varee well-known beauty expert in Montreal. You will excuse me, please? I am happy to have been weeth you and I 'ope you will enjoy the match Tuesday night."

We shook hands all around and Henri left to join his friends.

THE CONTEST CRAZE

It crops up in the funniest places. Take Marion, for example. Marion went along for some time, well content to take life as it came. Then that milkman over in Dorchester won the $25,000 prize in the cigarette contest. That hit Marion pretty hard I'll tell you, and she did a lot of thinking.

Why couldn't she do things like that? She had brains. There was no reason why she shouldn't pluck one of those juicy plums that manufacturers offer from time to time to stimulate interest in their products. Those were some of the thoughts that ran through her head.

So, ever since that time Marion has been hard at work. She has become a contest fiend and no prize is too little or too big to command her attention. True, she hasn't clicked with a prize yet, but she will.

Right now she's up to her neck in cigar bands on which she is writing slogans to bombard the manufacturers of that product. She's sure that sooner or later she'll win one of those automobiles that the cigar company gives away for the best slogan they receive each day.

Here's hoping and good luck to you, Marion!

NEW ENGLAND SHOE INDUSTRY BIG LEADER

By FRANK H. MELOON.

Cheering is the news that the New England shoe industry is better than holding its own, not only against domestic, but also against foreign competition. Note the declaration of A. H. Geuting, president of the National Shoe Retailers Association who says the shoe trade has definitely turned the corner. He adds that the shoe industry is the first major industry to show definite improvement as a result of the debt holiday.

* * *

At the same time it transpires that the first quarter imports of shoes from Czecho-Slovakia, whose big manufacturer Bata learned his trade in Lynn fell off 250,087 pairs, a decrease of 16.9 per cent from the total for the like period a year ago. Undoubtedly the New England-urged tariff has been a protective factor. An advance in shoe prices is expected in some quarters.

N. W. Hawkes, until recently vice-president of the Boston & Maine railroad, has been appointed one of four members of the official classification committee which works out the details of freight classifications. Mr. Hawkes' appointment is effective at once. His headquarters will be in New York.

N. W. Hawkes

* * *

Prof. William Z. Ripley, eminent Harvard authority on American railroads, declares freight rates should be advanced at once. This is exactly the view given in this column at the time the railroad presidents decided to ask for an increase. It was declared that the Interstate Commerce Commission ought for one to slash red tape and grant the relief demanded by the outstanding authorities.

* * *

It was pointed out that, if the step proved to be wrong, by any chance it could be easily corrected later on, as previous false steps taken with I. C. C. consent by Western railroads, for example, have been rescinded with no harm done. The Interstate Commerce Commission has, however, shown no signs of haste, and nothing approaching the efficiency in handling a purely domestic crisis that was exhibited in putting through the German moratorium plan.

* * *

Prof. Ripley reasons along the same line of thought originally offered in this column. The point is brought out that the advance in cost to shippers would be handed along to our millions of consumers, meaning little to any individual, particularly with commodity prices at current low levels. The 7,000,000 dependent on railroads for their livelihood would be relieved of imminent unemployment and wage-cutting menaces, which relief would in turn be reflected by freer spending, working to the general advantage.

* * *

No one expects the freight rate advance to cure all railroad illnesses any more than the moratorium is expected to clean up all the international troubles. Each offers a start in putting patients on the road to health.

New York bank leaders during the Coolidge administration decided it was unwise to have their shares listed on the New York Stock Exchange and such as were already listed were removed. The change did not, of course, prevent wide fluctuations. The times have changed, so that now the New York bank stocks are actually quoted for sales over a period an hour longer than when they were listed.

* * *

A typical account of the New York bank stock dealings published in Wall St. shows the 10 a. m. opening, noon prices, 2 p. m. prices and transactions up to 4 p. m., an hour after the closing of the big exchange.

Today's News of Live Stocks in Wall Street

Wall Street's attention today was riveted almost exclusively on the efforts of European bankers to furnish the credit facilities necessary for Germany to weather the storm. Fluctuations during most of the session were narrow, and trading dull.

American Sugar's Action Is Good

Action of American Sugar was good today when the stock lifted over a point in response to a little demand. Paying $5 a year, American Sugar moved to within a half-dozen points of its high for the year. Many believe sugar is bound eventually to reflect the workings of the Chadbourne pact.

Well-Known Shares Churned Narrowly

Well-known shares were churned narrowly in most of today's session, reflecting the waiting attitude assumed by traders. U. S. Steel and American Can duplicated each other's fluctuations. Only a few weeks ago these leaders sold at identical prices, but now Can has a 10-point advantage over Steel, due to the better outlook for the canners.

Anaconda Is Lower as Copper Drops

A little selling sufficed to send Anaconda lower, following announcement today that domestic copper was being offered at 7¾ cents a lb.

American Telephone Changes Narrowly

American Telephone changed only narrowly in most of the trading today, despite the favorable announcement that the big corporation earned 39 cents a share in excess of its $4.50 dividend requirements for the first half of 1931.

Investment Buying of Allied Chemical

Those interests who sold Allied Chemical & Dye Corp. stock around 200 last year are now buying their stock back. In fact, this sort of buying has been going on for several weeks and is of the long-pull variety. Allied Chemical has piled up huge reserves, including big cash and government bond totals and it is believed that even in these times it can easily cover its $6 dividend. Its multifarious operations also make for stability, for while some departments have shown considerable reduction in business others have held their status comfortably compared with the previous year.

English Investors Buying Drug, Inc.

There has been considerable buying of Drug, Inc. in the last six months by English investors and several brokers who have made a study of this leading American retail and wholesale drug corporation have advised clients to buy the stock. Most of this buying occurred when the stock broke some months ago to the low 60s.

Expect Int. Telephone to Maintain Dividend

Despite the fact that the International Telephone & Telegraph system is not expected to quite earn its $1 dividend requirements for the first six months, in view of its strong financial position it is expected that the regular annual $2 dividend basis will be maintained, particularly in view of the fact that future financial needs undoubtedly will be looked after at times with stock issues.

Dairy Products Prices Uncertain

Those who follow the dairy stocks marketwise have been withholding purchases owing to the uncertain price situation of dairy products. This is due to the heavy over-production of milk and of butter fats, new low prices having been made in these commodities. Producers of butter fat recently found that they could dispose of their surplus more profitably as cream than butter.

Curb Stocks Easy in Dull Session

New York, July 14 Curb stocks were again forced to lower price levels in what gave promise of being a record breaking session for dullness today, and declines were the rule in most sections of the market. Electric Bond & Share was sold in large volume in a relatively steady utility group, dropping back a point to a new low on the movement.

Wheat Closes Off in Chicago Market

Chicago, July 14 Wheat futures today closed nervous, ⅛ to 1⅛ cents down; corn ⅝ off to ¼ up; oats unchanged to ⅛ decline and provisions unchanged to a rise of 12 cents.

BOSTON STOCKS ARE LOWER

Stock prices were worked to lower levels in dull trading on the Boston Stock Exchange today. Changes ranged from fractions to 3 points or more. Edison proved an exception to the rule, gaining 2 points.

Brown & Co. preferred dropped 3 points. Losses of a point or more were shown for American Telephone, United Shoe and New England Equities.

Fractional recessions were shown for Union Gas Co., Nash Motors, Kreuger & Toll and Boston Elevated. Bigelow Sanford was a strong spot, gaining 1½.

Anaconda sold mostly off a point or more.

Copper shares did little on the news of sale of the red metal at 7¾ cents, equalling the record low attained on June 19. In the ensuing period a recovery to nine cents took place on buying stimulated by announcement of the Hoover moratorium. On June 27 the copper-share average reached its high on the recovery at 19.11. At the close Monday the figure was 15.95. The record low is 13.42 established on June 2.

Although the regular dividend has been declared, Allied Kid preferred sold at 65, off 2, equalling the year's low. Company manufactures a complete line of black, brown and color kid, suedes and linings of kid for shoes.

CITIES SERVICE IS WINNER

Topeka, July 14 (AP)—The Cities Service Company won a victory today in its court battle to enjoin enforcement of the action of the Kansas banking department in withdrawing its approval of certain of the concern's stocks.

A two-judge Shawnee County district court held, in effect, that the 1931 law under which the department withdrew its approval of the stocks was void and unconstitutional.

The judges overruled a motion by the state to dissolve a temporary restraining order against enforcement of the banking department's order.

PRICES MIXED AT CLOSE IN WALL STREET

New York, July 14—Financial markets merely drifted today, with little sense of direction, although final prices were irregularly lower.

Wall st. was generally inclined to confess inability to fathom the complex, international financial situation arising from the German crisis, and preferred to await a clearing of the atmosphere.

STIFFER AT FINISH

Stocks were heavy most of the day, and lower in the last hour. They stiffened a little at the finish. German bonds were again weak, although their decline moderated. The foreign exchange market was less confused however, quotations on the mark remained merely nominal.

Such stock as U. S. Steel, American Can, American Telephone and Consolidated Gas dot down about 2 points, then cancelled about half their losses.

Shares closing a point or so lower included Anaconda, Case, Standard of N. J. and Public Service of N. J.

The majority of shares showed unimportant changes. A few rails rallied, Union Pacific getting up about 1 point, and Atchison nearly 3. Trading was extremely sluggish the turnover exceeding 1,000,000 shares by a small margin.

Banking opinion regarding the German crisis remained highly confused. The renewal of the $100,000,000 credit which was to expire Thursday had been accepted as a matter of course, in view of the severe strain upon the Reichsbank which repayment under present circumstances would have entailed.

There was no unanimity of opinion in Wall st. as to what success the Reichsbank may have in raising further credits abroad under present conditions.

The spreading of the banking crisis to Hungary was pointed to here as showing the need for as early relief as can be arranged.

HOME NEWS IGNORED

German bonds were again under pressure, but the government issues were fairly well supported, making only moderate declines. In foreign exchanges trading in the German mark remained at a standstill, with quotations nominally between 22 and 23 cents. Foreign currencies generally showed a better tone, with the French franc and the Dutch florin in some demand.

Wall Street was not paying much attention to the domestic news. Copper was again depressed, with some metal available at the June low of 7⅞ cents a pound, off ⅛ of a cent. This was reflected in heaviness of copper shares.

First-half earnings statement of the American Telephone & Telegraph Co., showing dividend requirements of $4.50 a share met, with 39 cents to spare was favorably regarded. Western Union's quarterly statement will be made tomorrow, and is expected to show sharp improvement in net over the first quarter.

The marked improvement in the shoe and leather business in recent months has reached a point where increased shoe prices now are being considered in the trade.

Credit conditions continued stationary, with call money offered at 1 per cent in the outside market.

NORTH BUTTE

R. C. C., Hopedale—What progress has been made in development of North Butte, listed on the Boston Stock Exchange?

Ans.—President Paul R. Gow reports that during the past year an exhaustive study of the Continental Fault has been made by Andrew V. Corry, instructor in geology, Montana School of Mines, and in the general conclusions reached by him other eminent geologists thoroughly familiar with the geology of the Butte district concur. In the opinion of Mr. Corry the vertical displacement on the Continental Fault does not exceed 1300 feet and to the east of the fault there has been a horizontal displacement to the right of at least 2600 feet and possibly more than 4000 feet.

Recent development work in the Main Range Mine bears out this conclusion, which means that the Spread delight Vein and other major copper bearing veins developed west of the fault have been shifted southerly on the east side of the fault and should be cut on the 2200-foot level by a relatively short extension of the crosscut which has been driven southeasterly 3650 feet from the point where the spread delight vvein was displaced by the fault. While development work in the Main Range mine east of the Continental fault has not yet reached our first objective, i. e., the Spread Delight vein, the physical and geological conditions observable throughout present workings are most encouraging and lead to the following conclusions:

(a) That the major veins of the Butte district extend to the east beyond the Continental fault but are displaced by it;

(b) That the vertical displacement downward of the area on the west side of the fault does not exceed 1300 feet;

(c) That there has been a horizontal displacement to the right along the fault of not less than 2600 feet and possibly more than 4000 feet;

(d) That alteration of the country rock by mineralizing agencies has been as intense in the area east of the fault as anywhere else in the Butte district;

(e) That primary mineralization and primary copper ores of grade and character comparable to those of the proven area of Butte exist east of the Continental fault.

MAY EARN LESS

L. B., Charlestown—I have 50 shares Julius Kayser at 20. Is the company's business picking up? How about earnings?

Ans.—It is thought likely Julius Kayser's earnings for fiscal year ended June 30, 1931, will show a decline of 10 per cent from 1930, when net amounted to 87 cents a share. Net for six months ended December 31, 1930, was $1.27 a share. Dividend rate was reduced to $1 annually May 1, 1931. From August 1, 1930, the rate had been $2.50 a share, which was a reduction from $4 paid August 1, 1929. The stock is a speculation. Advice on the market position would not be worth while.

WOULD SPECULATE

G. L., Allston—Is White Sewing Machine a good investment. I thought of buying some, but shall await your advice.

Ans.—No dividends have ever been paid on the present common stock of White Sewing Machine. It is a speculation. Operations for 1930 resulted in a net loss of $289,776, or deficit of $3.45 a share, compared with net income of $778,739, or $1.89 a share, in 1929. A net loss of $40,062, or deficit of 70 cents a share was reported for the quarter ended March 31, 1931. Are you an investor? How much cash have you?

BELOW NEEDS

W. E., Watertown—Electric Auto-Lite has been suggested to me as a good investment. Do you consider it one?

Ans.—Electric Auto-Lite, yielding around 13 per cent, is a speculation. In the March quarter earnings of $1.23 a share did not cover dividend requirements of $1.50 for that period. In 1930 net income amounted to $5.32 a share, compared with $11.03 in 1929. Dividends have been paid since 1925; current $6 rate from third quarter of 1929.

NO DIVIDENDS

T. L., Winchester—Is Continental Motors a good investment? I could buy 100 shares at current prices.

Ans.—Continental Motors is a speculation on which no dividends have been paid since October, 1929. For fiscal year ended Oct. 31, 1930, net loss amounted to $2,037,800 before surplus deductions. Profit for 1929 was $710,500, or 34 cents a share. The savings bank is the best place for the amount you intend to spend.

DIVIDEND OMITTED

J. J., Boston—What is your opinion of Skelley Oil preferred? I have 25 shares at considerably higher levels.

Ans.—Skelly Oil preferred is a speculation. Quarterly dividend of $1.50 a share expected Aug. 1, rate paid from April, 1930, will be omitted. Operations for the March quarter brought a deficit of $776,000, contrasted with net income of $547,500 in similar period of 1930. Earnings applicable to the preferred stock in 1930 were $16 a share.

LISTED BONDS

M. B., Waltham—I want to invest $2000 in listed bonds. Please give suggestions.

Ans.—Buy $1000 each Allis-Chalmers debenture 5s, 1937, and Pillsbury Flour Mills first 6s, 1943. These bonds, listed on the New York Stock Exchange, yield 4.8 and 5.4 per cent, respectively, at maturity.

REGULAR RATE EARNED

E. G., Somerville—I have 25 shares Standard Oil of New Jersey at higher prices. What do you think of it?

Ans.—Though net of $1.65 a share in 1930 covered the regular annual $1 dividend on Standard Oil of New Jersey, it did not cover quarterly extras of 25 cents a share paid from second quarter of 1929. The company can point to an excellent record of earnings and dividends.

NO DIVIDENDS

C. L., Beverly—What is your opinion of a purchase of Congoleum-Nairn? Does it pay dividends?

Ans.—Congoleum-Nairn common is a speculation. It does not pay dividends. Nothing has been distributed since 1925. Net for 1930, after allowance for preferred dividends, was only 7 cents a share, contrasted with $1.28 in 1929.

A SPECULATION

C. W., Everett—I have been advised to pick up some Armour "A." Is it a good stock?

Ans.—Armour "A" is a speculation. The last dividend payment was 2 per cent April 1, 1926. We do not advise speculators. You will have to rely on your own judgment.

SERIOUS THINKERS COZY CORNER

Today, friends, we honor Attorney J. Pettibone McHatrack, who is circulating a petition asking the Federal Government to equip Al Capone's cell with a reviving door. "I am just as eager for law and order as the next fellow," says McHatrack, "but I am farsighted enough to realize that we have to treat Mister Capone with consideration, or else he'll get mad and won't even try to serve his sentence. My idea is to make the penitentiary as comfortable and convenient that he will want to stay there for the entire term of his lease."

A Plea for America

President Hoover gave testimony in 1918 before a subcommittee of the United States Senate Committee on Manufactures.

He was asked what he had been doing for the last twenty years and, having replied that he was an engineer, he was asked where he had been practicing his profession.

He answered—the United States, Mexico, China, India, Australia, South Africa and Russia.

The following question was then put to him: "You have spent more time in England in the last twenty years than you have in the United States, have you not?" To which Mr. Hoover replied: "I should imagine in the aggregate, yes."

Mr. Hoover, however, denied that he was a resident of London, although he said: "I had a house there."

Have we a clue here as to why the President of the United States is so intensely concerned with conditions outside of his own country and so insensible, if not indifferent, to the problems, the needs and the distresses of his own country?

There is a grave condition of unemployment in your own country, Mr. President.

It is estimated that six million Americans are wholly without work, and that as many more are struggling to keep body and soul together on the insufficient wage which is paid for part-time work.

There is a countrywide stoppage of industry, closed down furnaces, smokeless stacks, and silenced machinery.

The prosperity that prevailed when you took office has departed. Many merchants are without customers. Buildings are without tenants. In many instances mortgages are deemed hardly worthy of foreclosure.

In a recent petition signed by outstanding fellow citizens of yours, representing every calling, every walk of life, every section of your country, you were told that "private charitable funds are inadequate to alleviate the suffering resulting from these conditions"; that the "private savings of the workers are virtually exhausted"; that "regardless of any change that may occur in the business outlook, millions of your fellow citizens face a Winter of acute poverty and distress."

A Prosperity Loan has been proposed of $5,000,000,000 to relieve the unemployment, and in so doing, to start again the wheels of industry and to recover prosperous conditions as they have been recovered in the past by similar measures.

This proposal has received praise, endorsement and support throughout the country.

And yet no word comes from you. There is no sign from you that you are even aware of the constructive thinking that is going on about you.

Is it your idea that the Treasury should not be burdened by the issuance of obligations, to which your fellow countrymen would be only too glad to subscribe, to ameliorate the sufferings of Americans?

You seem willing enough to put a burden of $250,000,000 upon the Treasury and upon the backs of the American taxpayers to strengthen German credit and German business obligations which are held by the bankers in New York, but from which no relief will result to the needy and suffering among your own people.

How do you explain this? How do you justify it?

Our Unsightly Roads

The creator of the Yellow Kid, popular cartoon with children and grownups as well, used to put him in dumps, surrounded by tincans, goats and garbage.

If he could come to Boston, especially the northern approaches to the city, he could draw the scenes from actual conditions without relying on imagination.

The State itself owns much of this property surrounding the boulevards from Everett to the Lynn marshes. It allows them to remain in their disreputable condition, expecting they may be sold for industrial sites.

The State may learn some time from the experience of successful real estate operators that the house with a fresh coat of paint and neat lawns is more easy of sale than one allowed to run down at the heels.

The G. O. P. Tin Cup

The Republican party chieftains of Massachusetts assemble to consider the party debts.

Their ledger shows red—variously estimated from $90,000 to $280,000.

They may decide to plead for subscriptions, a quarter of a dollar from the rank and file up to $1,000 each from the comfortably well-off.

It is a strange commentary that the party synonymous with overflowing campaign chests may now decide to pass the hat.

Maine's Prosperity

The people of Maine, ever politically minded, give consideration to Clarence C. Stetson as a likely candidate for Governor next year. It is a logical contemplation. We are living in times of economic upheaval. Thoughts naturally turn to the few leaders among us who have demonstrated the courage and confidence to move forward. Maine has moved out of the depression by a remarkable diversification of her industries, and in this movement the Maine Development Commission of which Stetson is chairman has been the inspiration and foreguard.

Once-Overs

RESTRAINT—isn't that the hardest thing you practice?

There are so many things you want to do, so many things you want to possess that you are fighting constantly against indulgence in them to a foolish degree.

The cause of most of your financial worry has been lack of control of your desires.

Looking back, you can appreciate now how much of your trouble in money matters has been caused by your desire to sail smoothly.

You did not want to disturb your mode of living—your methods in business, conditions in your establishment, and so you traveled the way of least resistance.

You saw the breakers ahead, but closed your eyes and hoped matters would change so that you might not be involved in shipwreck.

It isn't the scheme of things that life should pass without trouble.

Greater self-restraint and more preparation in advance against possible handicap might have saved you the money and time.

It does not pay to be an ostrich, and, if you are unwilling to look life in the face and curb your desires, you will always have pitfalls ahead.

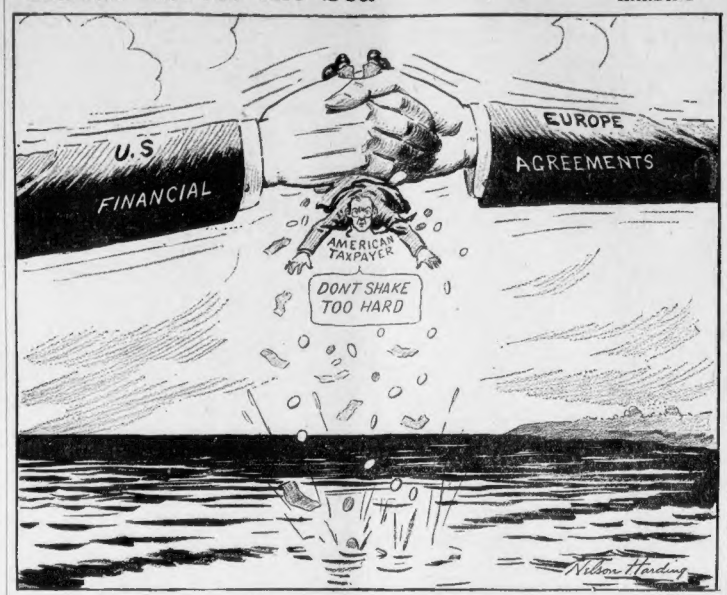
"Hands Across the Sea" -:-

By NELSON HARDING



The hands outstretched across the sea
Again are clasped (financially).
It's pleasing to be shaking hands
With governments of other lands

Providing that the person squeezed
Between those hands is also pleased,
And not too roughly shaken down
To meet the costs, as herein shown.

Listen, World!

By Elsie Robinson

Don't Respect Old Age!

THE WORST thing about growing old is that everyone tries to be nice to you. Which is enough to turn the finest human being into a general nuisance.

You've seen it happening. Fine men and women who have been good scouts all their lives. Had the usual failings, of course, fibbed, boasted, pouted, loafed, started rows, made fools of themselves—but, as long as they were 20, 30 or 40, folks treated them normally. Razzed them. Told them where to head in. Put up a battle when they got too rambunctious. All of which kept them sensible, simple and regular.

Elsie Robinson

Then along came the Fatal Fifties and everyone decided they were Getting Old . . . and "age must be respected." So the criticism and the razzing stopped. There were no more battles. No matter what they said . . . no matter how unfair or disagreeable they became . . . everyone agreed with them and excused them. Flattered them. Gave them the best seat. Shielded them from worry and unpleasantness.

Then what happened? Exactly what would have happened if they had received such unwholsome consideration at 20, 30 or 40. THEY BECAME PAMPERED PESTS . . . so selfish, opinionated and generally cranky that everyone secretly prayed they'd die pronto.

And, as a matter of fact, they actually did begin to die as soon as this old-age coddling started. For by that coddling they were cut off from the things that keep men alive and interested in life—from competition and constructive criticism and all the rude, stimulating human adventure.

All of which is both pitiful and idiotic. There is no reason why any normal, intelligent human being of 50, 60 or 70 should not be treated like a regular person. He's as able to stand an occasional bawling out as he ever was, and he needs it just as much.

IT'S AS DANGEROUS TO PAMPER YOURSELF AT 65, OR ALLOW YOURSELF TO BE PAMPERED, AS AT 25.

As for this "respect old age" tradition—phooey!

Age should be respected only when it achieves respect. A man does not merit respect merely because he has reached his 60th birthday. That birthday represents no heroic achievement. As a matter of fact, he doesn't like being 60. He would indefinitely have preferred staying 20. And, chances are, he's never had a new thought, nor committed a noteworthy act, since he was 20. Then why respect him because he has accumulated 40 years of peeve, prejudice, hardened arteries and fallen arches?

Personally, my constant prayer is that people won't be nice to me when I grow old. For I've noticed that nothing demoralizes me more than a lot of admiration, sympathy and politeness. Immediately my ego swells up like a Zeppelin and I want to hog the whole hangar. If anyone makes things sweet and easy for me, I try to get by with murder. And generally succeed.

Don't respect old age. Respect is no favor. It is often a tragic handicap. If you really love age and wish to serve it, give it a chance to stay young. Treat it as you'd treat an active equal. TREAT IT REGULAR.

Wise Words

Among the sources of those innumerable calamities which from age to age have overwhelmed mankind, may be reckoned as one of the principal, the abuse of words.
—Horne.

Men's hearts ought not to be set against one another, but set with one another, and all against the evil thing only.
—Carlyle.

The knowledge drawn from experience is quite of another kind from that which flows from speculation or discourse.
—South.

Experience is the child of Thought, and Thought is the child of Action. We can not learn men from books.
—Disraeli.

We all of us live too much in a circle.

Just Folks

Investments in Spirit

Add up the books again. Five years ago
We thought we had a fortune tucked away.
We bought a lot of stuff at prices low
We could have sold for profits any day.
We held the farm at ninety thousand flat
We couldn't sell it now for half of that.

In days when money had us by the throat
The books made pleasant reading you'll recall.
'Twas nice to add the figures and to gloat
That we had earned the sum and owned it all.
Those stocks aren't worth a third of what they cost.
On everything which seemed so sure we've lost.

Now close the books and let us read the years
And see if any ventures we have made
Wherein no lessening worth today appears.
There must be some investments which have paid.
Let's count our friends. Does not the thought occur?
Thank God, today they're still worth all they were.

They have not lost their value! They remain
Faithful and true to comfort and to cheer.
In what endures I think we've made a gain.
Love holds its place despite a panic year.
Add up the soul investments and you'll find
The lasting gains which make for peace of mind.

On the Atlantic

Flowers and Farewells

AT SEA, July 14—We were awakened this morning by the knock of a courier bringing a spray of bright spring flowers from Chief Purser Villar. A sun in magnificence was splattering a calm sea with dancing light. The ship moves steadily with a rhythmic sway. I'm glad I came—tra, la.

From the viewpoint of curiosity, the most interesting passenger aboard, it would seem, is Gloria Swanson. She gives the celebrity spark to a list composed mostly of Mr. and Mrs. Kahns, Mr. and Mrs. O'Hanrihans, the Comte B. d'Escayrac and valet and the usual ship nomenclature.

Edna Ferber, the novelist, is also listed. We happened to be fellow voyagers on the same ship last summer. I hope there will be no talk. Skimming through the "liste des passagers" I also note Miss Anne Morgan, Helena Rubinstein and, very appropriately, Mr. Sturgeon Fyscbe.

I asked Tatibouet, the steward, for suggestions as to breakfast. He indulged a typical Gallic shrug and said Americans usually desired the same fare—fruit, boiled eggs, toast and coffee. He ventured a bowl of steaming onion soup and I somehow sank back on the pillow.

Of all tradesmen catering to ocean voyagers, I believe the florist is farthest out front. Corsages for each day of the trip may be sent to Milady so prepared that put on ice they are fragrantly fresh. Orchids are incased in glassine tubes and the last day bouquet is as fresh as the first.

I am told that one feminine fair received nine corsages for each day—a total at a conservative estimate of $300. All of which assailed me with the thought of how many hungry that would feed for the trip. O, yes, for invalid passengers florists have diverting vases of oddly colored fish.

* * *

In a swing around the promenade today it seemed the most popular book among passengers was "Stalin," by Isaac Don Levine. At least I counted five copies and Edna Ferber would have been pleased at this late day to know they are still reading "Cimarron." I saw three copies.

* * *

A wave of economy has obviously swamped the French boats. At lunch I noticed the customary free bottles of wine—vin blanc et rouge—were missing from the tables.

* * *

Our neighbors at the adjoining table in the dining room are an aristocratic looking family of four, decidedly British. There is the silver haired-mother, an attractive daughter of say 18, a son thoroughly devoted to fondling a thin sprout of a mustache and a little boy in Eton collar. They had no cocktails, table wines or cordials but at the finish of the meal all, save the tad, pulled their cigarettes.

* * *

The ship's daily L'Atlantique in its "On Board" column says: "O. O. McIntyre will be sending back to the states this and that comment for his day by day column which appears in more newspapers than he can name. He gathers material during his deck promenade in the late afternoon, so they say, and yet he never looks left or right." They do not know I don't have to. I have spies everywhere.

* * *

In fact one of them just came in, removed his spade shaped beard, liner uniform and behold Hawkshaw, operator 202. He tells me that in the suite de luxe, "Versailles," the occupant is Miss Gertrude Lawrence and there are enough flowers there to carpet the Grand Central rotunda. Also that she received 52 wireless and 119 telegraphed bon voyage messages. We are about to give Hawkshaw his congee—or is that the word? I have no dictionary—for counting Miss Swanson's messages.

* * *

Ray Long, Jr., brought a wan five-year-old wording with three front teeth missing to call this afternoon. He seemed anxious to leave and I asked why. "I'm afraid I might frow up some more," he replied.

Hands Off the Navy

By Bainbridge Colby

THERE are hopeful signs throughout the country that the disposition of the Administration at Washington to skimp appropriations for the upkeep of the army and the navy is viewed with general disfavor, and, in fact, a spreading resentment.

This is especially true as to the navy.

IT REALLY SEEMS AS THOUGH THE NAVY HAD AT LAST FOUND ITS PLACE—ITS RIGHTFUL PLACE—WHICH IS IN THE HEARTS OF THE AMERICAN PEOPLE.

BAINBRIDGE COLBY

They are not content that it should be treated as a mere item in the nation's balance sheet, a prey to the puny science of cost accountancy, to be shaved and sliced to an irreducible minimum, and subordinated to the pork-barrel raids of the politicians.

No! The NAVY is OUR NAVY—SUPERB IN HISTORY, AND TODAY—ADMIRABLE AND SPLENDID. It is the beautiful embodiment of our finest resolves as a nation, and the effective instrument of the most gallant and heroic impulses that sway us as a people.

* * *

Who can read the history of the American Navy without a quickening of the pulse and a mounting pride—from the early days when the Rhode Island Legislature fitted up two tiny armed vessels in 1772 to drive Sir James Wallace and his "obnoxious" English frigate out of Narragansett Bay, down to the momentous hour in recent history when we sent our majestic fleet, under an American admiral, to the support of the Allied navies in the North Sea?

Even in the early days, our little navy which performed such indispensable service in protecting our coasts and guarding us from foreign insult, had its detractors and enemies at home. There were men in Congress at the beginning of the last century, like the South Carolinian Williams, who denounced the navy "as a curse to the country" and declared that he would "go a good deal farther to see it burned than to extinguish the fire."

Such men, unhappily, we have had with us always. Oliver Wendell Holmes in his stirring poem on Old Ironsides refers to citizens of this type as "those harpies of the shore." But I am thankful to say that they have been a negligible fraction of our people.

* * *

THE NATION AS A WHOLE LOVES ITS NAVY.

It cherishes the names of its great commanders. There are no names in our history surer to live than the names of John Paul Jones, Hull, Preble, Decatur, Porter, Farragat, Perry, Dewey—to mention only a few of the illustrious figures of the past that shed lustre and glory upon our naval history.

And today THE NAVY IS ABOUT THE FINEST OF AMERICAN INSTITUTIONS.

Its record has never been marred by a single act of cowardice.

I know of no charges ever having been brought against an officer of the navy, involving the misuse of public funds

It is a great school for our youth. It teaches them the rules of physical well-being, and not only the habit of work, but the secret of effective team work.

It implants in them sportsmanlike standards of life and conduct, which are tested and confirmed by the incessant competitions which are the life of a ship, and by the competitive rivalries between ships and fleets.

And it is a severe training. Its men must make good if they are to survive in the service.

In this age, when almost everything with an element in it of the heroic or of self-sacrifice seems to be regarded ironically and viewed even contemptuously, there is something beyond price in the honorable traditions of the navy.

THERE ARE SOME THINGS WHICH ECONOMY DEFILES, AND THE NAVY IS ONE.

Capital Silhouettes

SENATOR SMOOT wants Democratic Leader Joe Robinson to explain his party's position on the tariff, but we imagine it's the same as it was the last time, every Democrat being still unalterably opposed to a high duty on anything not produced in his own state.

* * *

THERE IS this to be said of the Kansas farmers—when they sent instead of Capper was Senator they grew more whiskers and less wheat, but produced the same amount of complaints.

* * *

DEPARTMENT OF JUSTICE, after some very clever work, announces that it has uncovered and broken up a system of graft within the Atlanta penitentiary. Can it be possible that there are crooks in that splendid institution?

* * *

IT IS disquieting to learn that Mahatma Gandhi has abandoned his trip to America, as what we need more than anything else just now is an authority on the Gunga Din type of summer clothing to show us what to wear.

* * *

THAT WASN'T a planet after all, that those Japanese astronomers discovered the other day, but s—— what's the word?—a mere celestial denizen.

* * *

WE OUGHT to be mighty careful in guarding Uncle Sam's "interrel" from the European gimme brigade, as it'll proably be the only thing he'll have to come home in from Geneva.

* * *

THE AMERICAN cawn crop this year will be nearly 900,000,000 bushels larger than it was last, but how many more half pints will this make?

* * *

THERE IS some hope in Senator Joe Robinson's promise of an effort to revise the Grundygrab tariff downwards. His Democratic colleagues will probably stand by him firmly—until the roll call begins.
